My Story
Back in 96 I crashed my bike, got high-sided off, thrown into a steel light pole in the centre dividing strip. Broke my pelvis, both shoulders and shattered my lower right leg. My pelvis and shoulders healed up as expected (I suffered shoulder pain when sleeping on one side too long though) but my leg was open to infections which caused many complications. Pins, screws, nails and plates all had to be removed until infections cleared only to go through the whole process again and again, it was nearly 2 years before I could walk unassisted, but even then my leg was badly deformed. I walked with a severe limp. Late 2009 I started getting pains in my leg that would drop me. So I went back to the hospital where all my surgeries had taken place they referred me off to specialists. Jan 2011 I got my leg re-constructed. I was told I would probably be off work for 3 months, wow were they wrong – 18 months later I returned to work. I had this frame with pins through my leg on for 53 weeks. Since then I have had constant pain and swelling in my ankle. By Jan 2015 it would take approximately 2 minutes when I got out of bed to be able to weight bear on my right ankle enough to hobble out of the bedroom, then about another 15 min before I could walk "normally". Normally for me then was behind a mask of pain, disguising my limp. Around that time I was introduced to "KYANI" I was sceptical at first but after 2 days on "Nitro Extreme" I got up in the morning and just walked out of the bedroom. After about 2 weeks on Nitro and Sunrise I found myself running – something I hadn't done in nearly 20 years, it was only about 300 meters but that was a huge thing for me, best of all I felt no pain. No pain whilst running, no pain the morning after – Wow! I haven't had a commercial pain killer since I started taking Kyani – Oh, and I know sleep through the night – no shoulder pain. Another thing I have noticed is that I have always suffered from Asthma & Eczema, neither of these bother me anymore – coincidence? I think not! I attribute this to Kayni as well.

Update on Parkinsons: Lucas's father has just swum 1 km at Sydney Olympic Park!! He has not done this since his Parkinson's was diagnosed 19 months ago. He had great stamina today and said he could have swum further. He also got a great report from his Cardiologist yesterday with perfect BP and ECG.
He is taking Xtreme 3 times a day and we have now upped Sunrise to two a day. He is elated and so are we!

Day 1 of my Testimonial. Have always been on Vitamins of some sort for my entire life.(I Rattled when I walked) Having a father who is a Pharmacist helps.Since joining Kyani in March went from finishing my Vitamins I wasn't getting paid to consume to the ones I was. Didn't notice a massive difference,however I definitely didn't feel any worse Beginning of June I stopped all vitamins and supplements and was going to go 2 months without, but only lasted till 14/07/15. Spent my youth from 15 to 35 years of age playing Baseball (A Catcher) and Aussie Rules.Needless to say because of baseball my knees and Hips are literally St...ffed. During the 6 weeks without supplements it took about 2 to 3 weeks for my bones to start aching.The last week of the test was quite debilitating, constant back massages with Heat ointment and taking about 2 to 3 hours for my legs and hips to warm up. Day 2 Lower back pain down from an 8 to a 4 out of 10. Knee soreness reduced. Next 7 days BRING IT ON!! Once I have no back and leg pain the serious weight lose will begin Need to lose 25Kg (no massive time frame). Will search out some of the Diamond Mine Personal trainers for a program. TBC

So, I just attempted to video my testimonial regarding Kyani & my endometriosis.
I had to stop because I got so emotional. The reason? In 21 years I have never not had to take pain relief.
I just realized I've gone almost 2 whole months with no pain relief.

Hello Kyani family, I have a very exciting on going testimonial to share with you!

My friends son James has a condition called Cataplexy. "Cataplexy: A medical condition in which strong emotion or laughter causes a person to suffer sudden physical collapse though remaining conscious. Cataplexy is an onset from Narcolepsy and is a debilitating condition. James is only 18 and is very restricted to what he can do in fear of having an episode, this includes laughing which is the biggest cause of episodes.

I gave James 6 days worth of Kyani and after the 6th day my friend called me and said he has never seen James so alive and active. He sleeps better and feels less fatigued. James is heavily medicated for this condition and once my friend has received his pack of Kyani goodies he is going to wean James off his meds in the hope he will no longer need them. (please note, James's medication isn't to keep him alive but to prevent episodes, there is no danger to his health if he stops taking them)
The family have been trying for years to find a natural alternative to his medication and it looks like they have found it in Kyani
I hope Kyani will change James's life so he can laugh with his mates for the first time!
If the trial is successful, James will be going to have a 48hr sleep test that he has every 6 months so we can get official results..

Stay tuned to this post for an update on how James goes after coming off his meds.

3 cheers for Kyani......Hiphiphooray!!!

An update on my mums progress since starting Kyani.... for anyone not familiar yet, she's had 2 bouts of cancer, tongue last year and lung this year, chemo and radiation has completely destroyed her body, she's 37kgs and constantly fighting off sickness. She's held 37kgs now for a while instead of losing weight. 1 week after taking nitro xtreme and sunrise her back pain had gone and she didnt realise she'd stopped taking her pain meds for it until i asked how her back was (degenerative spine and 2 prolapsed discs), 2.5 weeks since starting her bowels are now moving every 3-4 days instead of 5-6 days, and she's also as of today not taken her asthma puffer yet which she would normally take in the morning. Wanna know the kicker to ALL of the above..... she's only been taking xtreme once a day in the morning because she thought the dropper had more than 1ml in there and didnt want to take too much..... !!! INCREDIBLE! ! I cant wait for more updates and ill be doing everything i can to get her to record her testimonial while she is visiting me in Perth!

My Kyāni journey over the past three weeks or so has been more than I ever believed it could be.

The pain from the inflamed area around my lower spine (stenosis) has reduced dramatically from my waist down to my thighs and hips to a small area around the site of the damage.

The neuropathic pain effects from cervical spondylosis have also reduced - the rocking feeling in my head only appears when I am very stressed or tired instead of being almost constant. To think I was put on Lyrica last year to make me think I had no pain- big disaster and it has taken until now, with the help of Kyāni, for my body to adjust back to its normal rhythms and functions.

My blood sugar levels have evened out in the past two weeks and are much steadier. I was already working with my GP to reduce my insulin intake using a mix of metformin and insulin and now I am only taking Lantus once a day along with Metformin and have just started on Jardiance to assist with weight control.

One of the side effects of the Lyrica trial was a large weight gain and I was really struggling to get it back down. In the past two weeks I have lost 2kg, a bum, some belly and at least one thigh!

My brain functions all day at work. I don't have the afternoon brain deadening which I have been struggling with for at least 15 years and I can almost feel the neurons jumping between the two sides - like it is being joined back together.

There is still a way to go, but if you have chronic conditions which you can't seem to beat, or can't find relief for your pain, give this stuff a try - it may just help you too!
