URGENT WARNING From The Prophets Analyst Who Predicted The Subprime Mortgage Meltdown, ... The Financial Crisis of 2008 ... The Greek Sovereign Debt Crisis ... and Brexit

AMERICA'S DEATH SPIRAL

On April 14, 2021, the U.S. will experience a $3.1 trillion financial extinction event

Learn the simple steps you can take to avoid the carnage ...

WARNING: This content below may be shocking to some. Please proceed at your discretion.

Hello, my name is Graham Summers.

Let me ask you a question ...

From one American to another ...

Do you get a sense that our country has spiraled out of control?

If you look at what's been happening around us ...

It's hard not to think that the America we grew up in no longer exists.

Rioters have been allowed to lay waste to our once great cities...

Our constitutional rights and booming economy have been decimated by agenda-driven bureaucrats in the name of a health "crisis"...

Our education system is run by leftist radicals who be brainwashed our children into believing that free speech is "violence" and biological sex doesn't exist.

And our liberal media will ram your life by "cancelling" you if you dare speak out against any of this insanity.

No doubt you've shaken your head at all this and thought:

"When it all going to end?"

You're right to be worried.

Because no one has been able to stop the madness.

And now with President Trump gone and the Democrats about to take FULL control of the government...

If you're like most Americans, you're wondering how we get here.

But I'm here to tell you that there's a very specific reason why this is happening, which very few people understand.

I understand it perfectly.

Because I've spent that past 11 years of my life researching it. I also wrote a #1 bestselling book about it.

In fact, last year I even sent the urgent letter below to President Trump, Vice President Mike Pence and Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell to alert them to what was coming.

PHOENIX PRESS

The authorities failed to act on my warning...

And today, we're barreling towards a $3.1 trillion financial extinction event on April 14, 2021, that no one sees coming...

This singular event will lead to catastrophic economic destruction and social unrest far beyond what we've seen until now ...

In short, things are about to get much, much worse.

I'm talking about a massive wave of corporate, municipal and personal bankruptcies...

Widespread bank failures...

A 10% stock market decline...

A 25% unemployment rate...

And unprecedented social unrest that will lead to martial law being imposed throughout the United States.

Let me be clear...

My purpose isn't to strike fear in you.

I just want to make clear that when this coming crisis is over, there will only be two types of people...

Those who were prepared for what's coming...

And those who desperately wished they had paid more attention.

Today I'm going to spell out in plain English the root cause of our country's problems right now... and what's all means for your future.

Most important, I'll show you some very simple "bulletproof" strategies you can start using today to shield your family and assets from the coming chaos.

These are the same tried-and-true methods I'm using to protect my family.

Once you have the strategies I'm offering below ...

You'll be able to sleep soundly knowing you'll be among the few who are ready for what's on the horizon.

Sounding the Alarm

As I mentioned, my name is Graham Summers.

I'm the founder of Phoenix Press at Three Founders Publishing in Baltimore, Maryland.

I'm also the president and chief market strategist at Phoenix Capital Research, an independent financial research firm based in Alexandria, Virginia.

I've been featured on NBC News, Fox Business, CNN Money, and Marketwatch when they want expertise on central banking and global financial markets.

I made my name by predicting some of the biggest financial events in recent history.

Like in the spring of 2008...

At the time, Ben Bernanke was downplaying the risk of a global credit crisis after the Subprime Mortgage Meltdown.

> "I don't expect any serious problems ... among the large, internationally active banks"...

So I alerted my followers to prepare for the worst when I wrote:

> "Anyone buying into the idea that the credit crisis is over is a patsy."

I said that warning right before the subprime mortgage meltdown hit and large U.S. banks were bailed out by the U.S. Treasury.

Months later, CNBC's Jim Cramer was saying that fears of a stock market meltdown were "totally overblown" after the Bear Stearns implosion in September 2008.

But my work told me he was dead wrong ...

So I wrote this warning to my followers:

> "It seems pretty clear the overall market's heading downward. ... we're in for a nasty, nasty fall."

That alert went out right before Lehman Brothers collapsed and the stock market tanked a shocking 42%.

In fact, I'm on record not only calling the subprime mortgage meltdown and the financial crisis of 2008, but also the Greek sovereign debt crisis and Brexit.

I'm proud to say that my research has allowed my followers to avoid the biggest financial meltdowns in recent history.

For the last 15 years, I've been sharing my research with high net worth individuals, hedge funds, top-tier political advisors, and strategists at some of the largest financial institutions in the world.

Two years ago, I started Phoenix Press at Three Founders Publishing because I needed to tell as many people as possible about a coming crisis that would be much worse than 2008.

At the time, I had just completed my #1 bestselling book The Everything Bubble: The Endgame for Central Bank Policy.

My book research revealed that the U.S. was headed towards a dire financial and societal meltdown that most Americans knew nothing about...

What's worse, they weren't prepared for it.

Today, I'm here to tell you that the crisis I predicted is now underway...

We're already in the early stages of the collapse...

And on April 14, 2021, a seismic event will send our financial system into a devastating tailspin.

At this point, there's nothing the Federal Reserve, the government or even President Trump can do to stop it...

That's the bad news.

But here's the good news...

Below I'm going to offer you some extremely powerful strategies you can use to protect yourself from the carnage that's coming...

Just be sure to act on them today.

Because this crisis is not going to correct itself...

If you're not prepared for what's coming, you should do so now.

Time is running out.

No Turning Back

Most Americans realize that our history is like a pendulum...

It swings back and forth between extremes.

For example, the liberal social upheaval of the 1960s eventually swung back to the conservative Reagan revolution in the 1980s...

But this time seems different, doesn't it?

It doesn't seem like we're going to make it back from this.

Our once-cherished institutions are rotten to the core.

Common sense and human decency are relics of the past.

This used to be the land of optimists and dreamers...

But today, negativity and anger are everywhere you look.

And Americans are at each other's throats.

A recent poll by the American Psychological Association shows that more than more than 70% of us think this is the lowest point in U.S.history.

If you're like most Americans, you're probably wondering how the heck we got to this point...

Well, I'm here to tell you it wasn't by accident.

Since the financial crisis for 2008, the Federal Reserve and its accomplices in government have conducted a grand experiment on the American people.

They did it with our consent ...

They claimed it was for our own good ...

And you and I are witnessing the horrifying results play out on city streets and television screens across our country.

Sounds good, right?

But did the Fed's forty-take actually come true ... leading to increased economic prosperity for everyday Americans?

Let's take a look at the facts...

It Pays To Be on Top

The sad truth is the trillions that were pumped into the system over the past decade were not injected into the economy as we were promised.

Instead, banks and corporations kept most of it for themselves.

And they used this "free money" to take on new debt.

All told, the Fed's crisis policies resulted in an astonishing $4 trillion in new corporate debt, a massive 52% increase from 2008.

Banks and corporations used this new money for non-productive purposes, like stock buybacks.

This boosted their company's stock prices. Buybacks reduce the number of shares in circulation, which drives up demand.

Rising share prices mean more compensation/bonuses for top executives.

As you can see below, CEO compensation soared 99% since 2009, far higher than the median pay for everyday folks.

And rich CEOs weren't the only ones cashing in on the Fed's gifts...

Wealthy market speculators also used this "free money" to borrow at rock bottom rates to leverage up their financial assets, mostly stocks and real estate.

This led to a meteoric stock market boom ...

The market soared an astounding 150% from the bottom in 2009.

Housing prices also surged by 59% since their 2008 bottom.

That was great news for rich people...

The top 10% own nearly 85% of the stock market.

And 38% of millionaires in the U.S. are invested in real estate.

The Fed's rising tide of liquidity clearly lifted up the elite's boats...

But what happened to everyone else?

The Fed vs. the Middle Class

There's no other way to say this...

The Fed lied to us.

The trillions it created out of thin air didn't go to productive spending for research and development and capital investment that would have boosted economic growth.

Instead, it just increased demand for real estate and stocks.

Economic growth for the decade after the Great Recession averaged just 2.3%, well below the average the rate seen the previous period.

As you can see below, growth plummeted soon after the Fed's measures.

Low economic growth is terrible news for American workers because without growth, wages stagnate.

Naturally, annual wage growth for the past decade was a lousy 1.5-2.5%

In the years before the 2008 collapse, average hourly earnings were increasing at double that rate, at roughly 4% per year.

Thanks to the Fed, working folks saw their paychecks shrink... at the same time the cost of living was soaring.

As I mentioned, housing prices increased a whopping 59% since 2008.

CNBC reports that higher education costs soared 55% during that time.

And the Kaiser Family Foundation reports that health care costs shot up 67%.

Millions of Americans had less income ... just as their expenses were going to the moon.

So they needed to fill the gap between incomes and the rising cost of living,

And thanks to the Fed's cheap money, they turned to debt.

Consumer debt (student loans, auto loans, and revolving credit such as credit cards and personal loans) hit a record $ 4 trillion at the end of 2019.

That's a huge 59% increase in consumer debt since 2009.

And to make things worse...

Stagnant incomes, soaring costs, and rising debt service payments left people with no money to sock away...

Because of this, Fortune reports that 60% of Americans are now living paycheck to paycheck, with as little as $400 in savings for some.

And if you were one of the lucky ones who had some cash put away, like retirees... they'll find it politely crushed you too.

Savers used to rely on a safe 5% return on savings accounts and CDs back in the day.

The Fed ended that with zero rates...

Allowing millions into a desperate search for income to survive, often gambling with dangerous junk bonds and riskier stocks to make up for it.

CNBC reports that American savers lost a whopping 100-500 billion in interest payments on bank accounts and money market funds over the last decade.

That cash was taken directly out of the pockets of everyday Americans like you...

And it's been transferred into the pockets of the rich...

Have a look at the chart below using official Federal Reserve data...

As you can see, the Fed's post-crisis policies only made the rich richer... while the rest of the country took it on the chin.

And the rest of the country is mad as hell about it...

Coming Apart at the Seams

In America, we've always had a basic social agreement that bound us all together...

If you do well in school and work hard... you can get a good job... buy some property... live a good life... and spend your golden years enjoying the fruits of your labor.

It's the basis of the American dream.

Sadly, for most Americans that dream no longer exists.

Thanks to Fed's massive distortion of our financial system, seniors who've worked hard their entire lives had their golden years stolen from them...

Zero rates destroyed safe, consistent income from saving accounts and CDs...

Forcing many retirees to delay retirement for years... or work menial jobs at Walmart into their 80s just to feed themselves.

Middle class families have become debt slaves to fill the gap created by stagnant incomes and the rising cost of living...

Both parents have been forced to work outside the home just to make ends meet... leading to unstable families and record levels of anxiety and stress.

And millennials don't have it much better...

They were told higher education is the path to a better life.

But they've been crushed by an unthinkable $1.6 trillion in student loan debt.

They work at dead-end hourly wage jobs because of weak economic growth...

And they're stuck living in their parents' basements because artificially overpriced real estate is out of their reach.

The sad truth is... Americans of all ages now find themselves in severe economic distress.

Our once vibrant democracy has always depended on a strong middle class, promoting American virtues like hard work, moderation, and patriotism.

But these middle class virtues can't survive when most of the country's wealth is consolidated into the hands of our ruling class robber barons.

When the masses see the top 10% getting richer each year... while their lives get more miserable...

They start to feel like they have no stake in society...

And they start turning on their leaders... and themselves.

But there's more to it...

Our ruling class has exploited this crisis for their own ends...

With the help of a compliant media, the elites focus the narrative on divisive social issues that pit Americans against each other to divert attention away from the rigged policies they profit from.

Fox News' Tucker Carlson summed it up perfectly when he described the ruling class strategy:

> "What you're watching is class war, disguised as race war. Keep the population at war another's throats... angry, suspicious, tribal... and maybe they never figure out how much we're stealing."

Today, we're seeing this class war play out in cities and towns across our country...

Brainwashed millennials running around trying to burn down our "capitalist" system.

But we don't have a true capitalist system... where excessive risk-taking leads to speculation going broke.

Instead, these mini Marxists are actually railing against the "crony capitalist" system the Fed has created since 2008.

They're just too ignorant and misinformed by their liberal professors and the media to realize it.

Protecting The Millionaire Class

I bet by now you're wondering: Why did the Fed do this to America?

Well, think of it like this...

Imagine a world where the Fed didn't intervene in the financial system during the 2008 crisis...

Here's what would have happened...

The biggest banks in the world would have entered bankruptcy liquidation.

The U.S. economy's GDP would have dropped by roughly 20%.

The unemployment rate would have hit 13%.

The stock market would have dropped 60%.

Wealthy bondholders and stockholders would have taken on huge losses.

And corrupt politicians would have been thrown out of office for allowing it all to happen.

That would have been the proper remedy for excessive risk-taking and poor decision-making.

But the ruling class wasn't having any of it...

At the time, the ruling U.S. President, Treasury Secretary and roughly 230 members of Congress were multi-millionaires.

The executives of the big banks that own and control the Federal Reserve were also multi-millionaires.

They were never going to let themselves get wiped out.

So they authorized the Fed and the government to open up the monetary spigots to pour trillions into the U.S. economy...

But they didn't actually solve the underlying debt problem.

They just kicked the can down the road.

And today we're in much bigger trouble...

The housing bubble, which triggered the 2008 Crisis, was about $30 trillion in size.

When the 2008 crisis hit, the 3% debt deflation we experienced was just a tiny blip in the 65½ mountain of debt.

And it still felt like the world was ending.

But thanks to more than ten years of zero rates and QE, today we're sitting on an exponentially larger bubble that even dwarfs the housing bubble.

Today's debt bubble is over $100 trillion, more than 10 larger than 2008.

And if you include derivatives that trade based on the prices of that debt, it's an unthinkable $555 trillion.

Imagine what it would feel like for that red line in the chart above to drop 20% or 50%... instead of 3%?

That's what we're facing today.

All we needed to trigger an epic financial meltdown was a pin to pop this massive debt bubble.

Well, we just got it with the Coronavirus pandemic...

And that historic event sent us into the first stage of America's death spiral...

Stage 1: The Shock

Wake no mistake...

What we just experienced with the Coronavirus pandemic and global shutdown is unprecedented...

Never before has the economy gone from robust growth to completely stopping in the span of a few weeks.

And the fallout was catastrophic...

The Dow Jones fell a shocking 10,500 points in two weeks...

It was the fastest stock market decline in history.

As nearly all businesses closed, millions of Americans were immediately thrown out of work...

And unemployment claims shot practically off the chart...

The previous record high for weekly unemployment claims was 695,000 in 1982...

But the week ending March 28, 2020 shattered that mark with more than 6.6 million claims.

That's nough 10 times that any prior week's unemployment data on record.

Since then, the number of unemployed in the U.S. has risen by a shocking 46 million people.

That means nearly half the entire working population is out of a job.

As the labor market has deteriorated, it had a drastic ripple effect on the economy...

The New York Times called it:

> "The End of the World Economy as We Know It"

Retail sales crashed as the coronavirus lockdown from spending...

That 8.7% retail drop was more than double the previous record of 3.8% in November 2008 during the financial crisis.

The shutdown also led to an historic decline in U.S. industrial production...

As you can see, manufacturing, mining, and electric and gas utilities declined by a massive 16.4%.

This was the steepest reduction in consumer spending and industrial output caused a massive 31.7% second-quarter GDP decline, the largest ever on record.

That decline would be nearly 7 times worse than the 8.4% slump in the worst quarter of the Great Recession.

Across the board, the Coronavirus pandemic devastated the U.S. economy to no other event in our history.

Time magazine is calling this crisis: "The First Global Depression of our Lifetime."

In response, the Federal Reserve and the U.S. government went nuclear, sending us into the second stage of the collapse...

Stage 2: The Counterstrike

To fight the economic fallout, the Federal Reserve and the government responded to the crash by going all out...

Between the two of them, the U.S. has spent over $6 TRILLION in monetary and economic stimulus.

To put it into perspective, that's more than the GDP of Japan... the third largest economy in the world.

And the U.S. just spent it in a little over six months' time!

Here's what the Fed did...

1. Cut interest rates from 2.25% to 0.0%.
2. Launched a $1.5 trillion repo program.
3. Launched a $700 billion QE program.
4. Began buying commercial paper debt instruments.
5. Opened the discount window to the eight largest banks in the US.
6. Expanded the repo program to $1 trillion per day.
7. Began buying municipal bonds, corporate debt, student loan debt, even auto loans.

Basically, the Fed said it would buy everything to keep the bubble from bursting.

Congress also passed a $2 trillion rescue package, including 15,200 one-time cash payments and a $600 bump in standard unemployment benefits.

It also offered $349 billion in emergency loans to help small businesses.

So what did this enormous cash infusion buy?

Well, stock and bond markets stabilized.

But the stimulus is just stalling the free fall of our financial system...

The Fed can print all the money it wants...

But we're in an economic crisis, not a monetary one.

And no money-printing scheme in history has ever successfully solved an economic crisis.

It certainly can't cure an economic demand shock that comes from nearly 50 million Americans being thrown out of work all at once.

What's worse, many of these lost jobs are never coming back...

Forbes reports that economists expect roughly 42% of those lost jobs to disappear for good.

That's why the Federal Reserve is predicting an unemployment rate of 25%, the same as the Great Depression.

Unfortunately, many Americans are already in distress...

CNN reports that 4.3 million homeowners missed their mortgage payments in May.

And nearly 15 million credit cards and almost 3 million auto loans were already in "financial hardship" status in April.

These warning signs point to what Business Insider is calling: "a devastating wave of household bankruptcies."

That means consumer demand is all but dead for the foreseeable future.

That's horrible news for the U.S economy because consumer spending makes up 70% of GDP.

The economy is taxed without it.

And as tens of millions of customers fail to return to businesses, many of them will fail.

We've already seen more than 100,000 small businesses close forever.

Moody's chief economist Mark Zandi believes that number could be an astonishing 1,000,000.

Already, nationwide Chapter 11 filings are up nearly 300% year over year in May.

And it's not just small businesses that are being hit...

Large corporations like Hertz, JH Hour Fitness, J.Crew Group Inc., Neiman Marcus Group, JCPenney, Brooks Brothers, and New York & Co. have also gone under.

And many more are on the brink...

Right now, corporations are laying down, cleaning house and cutting costs, furloughing workers, and taking advantage of federal and state pandemic relief programs.

But these relief programs can't go on forever.

When they end, corporations will start burning through their cash.

And then business bankruptcy filings will soar.

The New York Times reports:

> "The Fear of bankruptcy petitions from the worst economic downturn since the Great Depression could swamp the system"

And when it does, a downward spiral will begin...

Tens of millions of people and businesses out of work will create a massive municipal budget crisis in states and cities.

Tax revenues will plummet.

The Atlantic reports:

> "Right now, sales taxes, real-estate transfer taxes, income taxes, fines and fees—they are all collapsing, leaving local governments with a budget gap expected to land $1 billion next year."

That has reports predicting yet another 5.3 million in additional job losses if there's no federal aid.

That just means more business failures … and then more job losses … and so on.

In short, the coming unemployment and bankruptcy Armageddon we're about to see in stage 3 will pack even closer to America's financial extinction event on April 14, 2021.

STAGE 3: System Failure

As millions of American consumers and businesses file for bankruptcy in record numbers, here's what will happen:

Tenants will stop paying rent……

Homeowners will stop paying mortgages…

Landlords will default on mortgages…

Businesses will default on loans…

And borrowing will fall off a cliff…

This will excoriate bank profits and balance sheets.

Banks are already reeling from the shutdown.

Reuters recently reported:

> "U.S. bank profits plunged 70% on coronavirus loss provisioning."

And as the bankruptcy tsunami hits, the amount of debt banks that will have to write it off as uncollectible will skyrocket.

But the banks themselves are also in debt…

So too many defaults in a short time will burn through the reserves like wildfire.

The Federal Reserve knows this…

Neil Kashkari, the chief at its Minneapolis bank, recently told CBS News:

> "Large banks have more capital than they had before the 2008 crisis, but not enough."

To delay the inevitable, banks and financial institutions gave their borrowers Rolaverse on their debt payments

But that debt holiday can't last forever…

The bulk of those banks' income comes from loan payments. Without it, they are insolvent.

Banks can't go without income for long stretches of time. And we're now more than nine months into this crisis.

Here's the critical part…

For months my sources inside the Beltway told me that the bad loan implosion was being held off by the election officially being decided.

Banks were using that event as a kind of "let's wait and see" for declaring just how horrific the bill-out has been in terms of corporate debt, commercial real estate, etc.

But now… with the Democrats winning not only the presidential election, but the House and Senate as well…

Now that Biden is in the White House and they know they'll be dealing with a government bailout friendly administration…

These big banks will start the process of coming clean about the carnage happening to their balance sheets…

But no matter what the government may try to do to help, they won't be able to stop what's coming …

And the enormous scope of the problem will be revealed in full to the general public for the first time on April 14, 2021.

That's when two of the largest banks, JP Morgan Chase, and Wells Fargo, report earnings on the same day.

Between these two banks, you've got $5.5 TRILLION in assets, which is an astounding 23% of US GDP.

The world will be holding its breath to see those numbers because it will be a signal of what's to come.

And when the news of an ugly chain of corporate/personal defaults and the resulting massive holes in the big banks' balance sheet hits…

Panic will set in …

And global liquidity is going to start drying up … just like it did in 2008 when Bear Stearns and Lehman Brothers troubles became public.

And stock markets will crash in a spectacular fashion…

Here's an important point to remember.

Business insider reports that:

> "The bail market has been largely supported by companies buying back their own shares."

But those buybacks dropped off the face of the Earth during the pandemic as companies went into survival mode.

Plus, the Federal Reserve field buybacks to prevent bank accepted rescue funds.

So that lifeblood is now out of the market…

Without it, we're primed to see a massive 70% stock market decline or more.

That means that public and private pension funds, charitable endowments, insurance companies, and stock and bond mutual funds will also crash.

And that's going to crush Americans of all income levels.

Unfortunately, many everyday investors are convinced that the worst is over for the market.

They think the Fed's counter strike has remedied the worst of the crisis, with stocks rebounding to near all-time highs.

But people have short memories…

After the Federal Reserve and the U.S. Treasury launched unprecedented market interventions after the Bear Stearns collapse…

The S&P 500 shot higher in May 2009 to within 9% of its October 2007 peak.

But when the systemic damage to the banking system eventually became known, the S&P 500 fell a whopping 57%.

The systemic damage of the Coronavirus shutdown still hasn't been felt because trillions that have been thrown at the problem.

But this economic wreckage will eventually work its way through the system in the coming months … as sure as night turns into day.

Look, the Fed isn't a superhero.

It can't just 40 million people back to work and make more than a million American companies magically solvent.

We've experienced the death of demand AND supply. And neither is even close to going back to the way they used to be.

That means, as I warned my readers back in 2008, the markets are in for a nasty, nasty fall.

Stage 4: The Catastrophe

Are you prepared for the worst-case scenario when April 14, 2021 hits?

Because here's what it will look like on the ground…

Due to cooling capital markets and banking failures, joblessness and poverty are likely to explode.

This will cause government tax revenues to plummet as income falls off a cliff and capital gains disappear.

This will send our national deficit soaring.

Welfare and social security programs will face massive cutbacks, leading to social unrest.

The Federal Reserve will fire up the printing press yet again to expand their debt monetization programs.

But it will just be pushing on a string.

There will be no demand or supply to boost the economy and keep markets afloat.

The U.S. government will step in to help support the most systemically dangerous banks…

But after the massive Wall Street giveaways of 2008, there's no public appetite for more billionaire bailouts.

And gargantuan government funding will be difficult with record deficits and paralyzed global capital markets.

That's when economic catastrophe sets in.

As the financial contagion spreads, countries across the world would turn inward…

Declaring draconian lockdowns to preserve resources and protect their own supply chains.

Bank issues would be so big that policy makers would resort to depositor bail-ins (banks confiscate your account) and wealth taxes.

But that won't be enough to keep banks from failing.

As people realize their savings are at risk, this will cause a run on banks…

Many people will lose access to their money. Lending would grind to a halt.

The Fed will have to finance business activity through stock purchases…

And it will finance the government by buying Treasuries at absurd levels.

With all this money printing, the dollar will drastically decline in value, leading to terrifying bouts of inflation.

That will drive up the prices of gas, food, and consumer goods to unattainable levels.

Crime and desperation will increase as competition for limited resources becomes intense.

As the government policies fail, what little faith is left in institutions will evaporate completely… leading to outright anarchy.

At this point, our entire financial system and societal structure will collapse.

And the fate of 350 million Americans will be in God's hands.

Sound scary? It is.

Look, I don't have a crystal ball.

Nobody does.

The collapse may not play out precisely as I have described.

But make no mistake…

An historic meltdown is coming.

It's about to start on April 14, 2021.

And I'm not the only one who knows it's about to hit…

Like me, these renowned market watchers also predicted the 2008 crash before it happened…

And here's what they are coming our way in the near future…

Nouriel Roubini, New York University economist and author of Crisis Economics:

> "You're going to see hard-hearted hedge funds vulture enough. The few stores that are open, like my Whole Foods, have security guards both inside and outside. There are Dove Bar ice cream bars at Food Saver. You're selling me everything's going to become normal in three months? That's nuts!"

Peter Schiff, CEO of Euro Pacific Capital and author of The Real Crash: America's Coming Bankruptcy - How to Save Yourself and Your Country:

> "If you think the rioting and looting are bad now, wait until the supplemental unemployment benefits expire, or inflation wipes out their value. What happens when people can't afford to pay their rent and power bills anymore? What we're seeing now is just a glimpse of what's coming."

Ron Paul, former U.S. Congressman and presidential candidate:

> "The economic collapse will be worse than the Great Depression. This will result in widespread violence along with government crackdowns on liberties, accelerating the US slide into authoritarianism."

There's no way to get around it: economic devastation is coming.

If you're unprepared when it hits, you won't be worried about maintaining your current standard of living.

No, you'll be in a desperate search for access to assets to help you feed, clothe and house your family.

That's why I immediately recommend you take action to protect yourself today.

To help folks like you prepare, I've compiled four bulletproof asset protection strategies into a special report called Crash Proof: Four Ironclad Asset Protection Strategies for the Coming Collapse.

The leading edge techniques you'll find inside report are the same tried and true safeguards I'm using to protect my family.

Here's a preview of what you'll find inside…

Strategy #1: Precious Metals

If paper money becomes worthless in a crisis, you need an asset on hand that has inherent value.

That's why you should move a portion of your wealth into precious metals…

Precious metals shelter your capital from systemic risk …

But you shouldn't own just any precious metals.

Many gold and silver ETFs do not actually have all the gold or silver they claim to.

That means you could be left holding nothing of value in a crisis.

So I've found a better way…

On page 3 of my special report, I'll reveal two precious metals strategies that will shelter your capital from risk … but also GROW your purchasing power…

Including one asset that has doubled the performance of the Dow over the since 1967.

Strategy #2: Risk Management

What do you really own when you hold cash in a bank account or buy stocks?

In today's financial world, virtually no one has the actual physical money or share certificates that they own or other assets held by their various custodians/custodians.

Instead, their other assets are electronically "parked" at their bank or brokerage firm.

Well, what happens to those assets in the event that the brokerage firm goes under due to insolvency or negligence during the coming crisis?

Most investors have no idea.

But they should.

Because the Securities Exchange Commission found that roughly 1/3 of the firms the SEC examined failed to meet custody rule requirements.

In other words… they didn't really know where their clients funds were, how big or how small they were … in fact, many of their clients' assets were lost that they themselves were legal custodians of their clients' funds.

But financial firms you're in business with go belly up, you can find yourself in a world of hurt.

What happens then? Will you be able to access your accounts? How soon can they be transferred out of the firm to another custodian?

That's why it's important to keep your holdings in financially safe firms with low leverage and a low risk portfolio.

Is your firm one of those?

On page 11 of my special report, you'll find a list of the top 25 "systemically risky" banks based on derivative exposures.

These are all banks that will have significant systemic risk in the event of a crisis.

If your institution is on this list, your assets may be at high risk during the coming crash.

So you need to act on this information now.

Strategy #3: If You Must Own Stocks, Own These…

If you DO have to stay invested in stocks, you should focus on only one type of company…

Historically, this type of company has declined far less than others when crisis hit…

In fact, it actually becomes even MORE attractive when stock prices fall.

I've compiled a list of 5 "crisis-proof" stock tickers you'll want to own when the meltdown comes.

These stocks have seen massive gains after previous crashes like the ones in 2001 and 2009.

And you can find them all on page 14 of my special report.

Strategy #4: How to Get Rich When the Collapse Hits

History's greatest investors have always known that the best time to make life-changing gains in the market is when panic sets in…

Baron Rothschild, an 18th century British nobleman and member of the wealthy Rothschild banking family, had a sight…

He's famous for saying "The time to buy is when there's blood in the streets."

Warren Buffett uses this strategy too…

He made a cool $1.5 billion during the 2008-09 financial crisis by investing in Goldman Sachs when its stock had tanked after Lehman Brothers collapse…

What these investing legends knew is that great fortunes are made in times of panic.

As Buffett put it: Be greedy when others are fearful.

That's why I've created 3 simple ETF trading plays you can use to profit from the coming panic…

When the markets take a nosedive, these 3 ETFs will offer the potential for life-changing gains over the years.

If you're the type of investor who is eager to make big money while others are paralyzed by fear…

The Time to Act Is Now!

Like I mentioned before, my name is Graham Summers.

I publish my best ideas in a research letter called Strategic Impact.

Each month, I uncover little known investment opportunities that are tied to massive shifts in the financial system…

Opportunities that will make you money from what's coming down the pike.

Over the last 10 years, I've been providing investment insights to high net worth individuals, hedge funds, top for-profit advisors, and strategists at some of the largest financial institutions in the world.

During that time, I've developed a framework for understanding how policy (both financial and political) impacts the financial markets. And I've used this framework to show my clients truly extraordinary returns.

Strategic Impact is my vehicle for bringing this information to individual readers like you.

Put simply, I'm keeping a close eye on where the money flows to locate big investment opportunities.

Making Strategic Impact your investment guide to a complex world.

I don't mean to brag, but this letter is one of the most valuable things any investor could have…

I also want you to have a copy of my #1 bestselling book, The Everything Bubble: The Endgame for Central Bank Policy.

It's a 300 page, in-depth look at the coming financial crisis.

U.S. Financial system is as screwed up as it is, or have questions about what's coming down the pike in the financial markets, you'll find it within its pages.

The Everything Bubble is the result of more than 10 years of research…

This book is intended for anyone who wants to understand how the U.S. financial system truly operates, and how the Federal Reserve has responded to every crisis by creating an even larger and more dangerous bubble.

Plus, you'll discover what the next round of Federal Reserve policy will look like when The Everything Bubble (the final bubble in sovereign bonds) bursts.

Once you read it, you'll immediately know more about how the financial system works (as well as what's to come) than anyone else in your social circle.

Have a look at what readers are saying about my bestselling book online…

Great Book!

"This book gives the reader a glimpse at the past, present, and future manipulation of the global elite. It is up to the reader to put what he learns in it towards their self preservation."

– J.V.P. M.

Prepare for the inevitable!

"An in-depth analysis of the U.S. financial system, followed by clearly laid out warnings that every American should take notice of. As a retirement saver who observes markets daily, it seems we are truly at an unprecedented inception point in the global financial markets. Prepare with eyes open is unlikely, and undoubtedly the course of action will be highly debated. This book represents your first step in preparing for what seems like the inevitable."

– T. CHAMO T.

A must for all who care about their financial future…

"Smart reading – simple, plain and direct explanations of what the greatest bubble in the world looks like, why was it formed, how it will pop, and what consequences will it bring! It is a must for any investor and also anyone who has capital that they wish to protect from financial disaster."

– S.NICK, P.

One of the wisest investment choices.

"As a retired Wall Street financial & investment advisor, over the years I've been asked to review and comment on various financial publications. Few have been as well written and thought out as this one. Mr. Summers is what he brings the reader to precisely how and why the bubble is forming and growing. This might turn out to be one of the wisest investment choices you have ever made."

– RLAN G.

Every American must read this book.

"It is more than obvious where our financial lives are heading. For the safety of YOUR families, READ this book!"

– D.TOM A.

You'd normally pay at least $9.99 for my book on Amazon, plus postage and packing…
