The parties' proposed second amended settlement agreement not only fails to resolve the concerns raised by amici curiae Truth in Advertising, Inc. (TINA.org) and AARP in their March 2015 opposition (Dkt. 127-1), but raises additional issues not previously presented in the parties' original agreement. First, the alterations to the injunctive relief provisions are minor and insufficient. Second, the proposed structural changes to the monetary relief and attorneys' fees provisions require a new and different analysis, and introduce additional fairness concerns not presented by the parties' original agreement.

The Alterations To The Injunctive Relief Are Negligible

Despite facial changes to the injunctive relief, the revisions are not substantive and continue to be unfair, unreasonable, and inadequate relief to remedy the deceptive advertising claims challenged in the complaint and released by the class through this settlement. The parties have not expanded the limited injunctive relief, but rather, simply clarified that in addition to proscribing use of the previously agreed-upon six terms, the relief now also proscribes "any version" of those statements using variations of the proscribed terms (e.g., 'repairs,' 'rebuilding,' 'rejuvenation,' etc.)." Second Amended Settlement Agreement, ¶ IV.E. Defendants remain free to market their glucosamine supplements—absent substantiation—with equally deceptive claims, such as being able to build cartilage, improve joint function, and reduce joint pain, and gain a class-wide release and judicial imprimatur permitting them to do so. See Pearson v. NTBY, 772 F.3d 778, 785 (7th Cir. 2014) (criticizing inadequate injunctive relief that is in fact adverse to the class, noting "[t]he injunction actually gives [defendant] protection by allowing it, with a judicial imprimatur (because it's part of a settlement approved by the district court), to preserve the substance of the claims by making—as we're about to see—purely cosmetic changes in wording, which [defendant] in effect is seeking judicial approval of"). The settlement of a class action should not provide an outcome that is actually contrary to the goals of plaintiffs' complaint challenging such deceptive advertising. Id. Thus, the same objections lodged by TINA.org and AARP in their original opposition—that the settlement should be rejected because the proposed injunctive relief is meaningless—apply equally to the second amended proposed settlement.

П

The Amendment's Creation Of A Capped Settlement Fund With A Percentage-Of-The-Fund Attorneys' Fee Provision Is Objectionable Because It Directly Reduces The Relief Available To The Class

The parties propose to change the previously uncapped settlement fund and flat $3 million attorneys' fee award structure to a settlement fund now capped at $6,510,000 with a clear sailing attorney fee provision awarding 33% of the fund to the plaintiffs' attorneys. Compare Amended Settlement Agreement, ¶ VI.A with Second Amended Settlement Agreement ¶ VI.A. This structural change, which now directly offsets the relief available to the class, requires a different legal analysis and raises additional fairness concerns not previously presented. ¹

Under Ninth Circuit law, it is error for a district court to approve a settlement that fails properly to evaluate fees presented as part of a percentage-of-the-fund calculation. See Staton v. Boeing Co., 327 F.3d 938, 972 (9th Cir. 2003) (reversing approval of settlement and remanding with instruction to conduct proper fee award assessment). The Staton court held that:

the parties may negotiate and agree to the value of a common fund (which will ordinarily include an amount representing an estimated hypothetical award of statutory fees) and provide that, subsequently, class counsel will apply to the court for an award from the fund, using common fund fee principles. In those circumstances, the agreement as a whole does not stand or fall on the amount of fees. Instead, after the court determines the reasonable amount of attorneys' fees, all the remaining value of the fund belongs to the class rather than reverting to the defendant.

In this case, in which the injunctive relief in the proposed settlement is of little to no value, awarding attorneys' fees in the amount of 33% of the fund is unreasonable, particularly in light of the 25% benchmark applicable in the Ninth Circuit. See Powers v. Eichen, 229 F.3d 1249, 1256 (9th Cir. 2000) (finding district court abused its discretion by awarding attorneys 30% of the settlement fund, recognizing benchmark for percent-of-the-recovery attorneys' fees in the Ninth Circuit is 25%); Myles v. AlliedBarton Sec. Servs., LLC, No. 12-cv-05761-JD, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 159790, at *15-16 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 12, 2014) (denying preliminary approval of class-action settlement where attorneys' fees were set at 30% of the gross settlement amount, stating that there was no reason to award more than the Ninth Circuit's 25% benchmark especially in light of "the manifest problems with the proposed settlement"). See also Resnick v. Frank (In re Online DVD-Rental Antitrust Litig.), 779 F.3d 934, 949 (9th Cir. 2015) (clearly stating that the Ninth Circuit's benchmark percentage for attorneys' fees is 25%); Jones v. GN Netcom, Inc. (In re Bluetooth Headset Prods. Liab. Litig.), 654 F.3d 935, 942 (9th Cir. 2011) (same); Six (6) Mexican Workers v. Ariz. Citrus Growers, 904 F.2d 1301, 1311 (9th Cir. 1990) (same); Paul, Johnson, Alston & Hunt v. Graulty, 886 F.2d 268, 272 (9th Cir. 1989) (same).

The benefit to the class in limiting the fees to the 25% benchmark is 1 manifest. Now that a fund has been established, reducing an award of attorneys' 2 3 fees to the accepted 25% will directly benefit the class by $520,800.² Ш 4 CONCLUSION 5 In sum, the proposed revisions fail to address the clearly inadequate 6 injunctive relief, establish a capped settlement fund, and provide for a 7 percentage-of-the-fund clear sailing attorneys fee provision that exceeds the 25% 8 benchmark for such attorneys' fees applicable in the Ninth Circuit. Accordingly, 9 10 the proposed second amended settlement agreement is even more unfair and objectionable than it was when TINA.org and AARP filed its original amicus 11 curiae brief. 12 For the foregoing reasons and those previously articulated, amici curiae 13 TINA.org and AARP respectfully urge this Court to deny final approval of the 14 15 proposed settlement.
