

1
2
3 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
4 NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
5 SAN JOSE DIVISION

6 KAREN THOMAS, et al.,

7 Plaintiffs,

8 v.

9 COSTCO WHOLESALE CORPORATION,

10 Defendant.

Case No. 12-cv-02908-BLF

11 ORDER
12 (1) GRANTING DEFENDANT'S
13 PARTIAL MOTION TO DISMISS, AND
14 (2) GRANTING DEFENDANT'S
15 MOTION TO STAY, AND 16 (3) DEFERRING RULING ON 17 DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR 18 PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

[ECF 89]

United States District Court
Northern District of California

19 The above-captioned putative class action is brought by Plaintiff Lisa Liddle¹ against 20 Defendant Costco, alleging that eight of Defendant's food products are improperly labeled in 21 violation of both California and federal law. Presently before the Court is Costco's Partial Motion 22 to Dismiss two causes of action asserted for the first time in Plaintiff's Third Amended Complaint 23 ("TAC"): breach of the implied warranty of merchantability and negligent misrepresentation. In 24 the alternative, Defendant seeks partial summary judgment as to Plaintiff's claims relating to six 25 of the eight products at issue, contending that the safe harbor provisions of California's Sherman 26 Act and the federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act ("FDCA") shield it from liability with regard to 27 any product for which it received certain vendor guarantees. Additionally, Costco asks the Court 28 to dismiss without prejudice or stay Plaintiff's claims related to Costco's use of the term
"Evaporated Cane Juice," or ECJ, on the label of a chocolate milk product.

Having reviewed the papers and oral argument of the parties, and the relevant law, the Court hereby GRANTS Defendant's Partial Motion to Dismiss and GRANTS Defendant's request

¹ Original named Plaintiff Karen Thomas' claims were dismissed from this action, with prejudice, in a March 31, 2014 Order by Judge Edward Davila. See ECF 83 ("Dismissal Order").

1 to stay Plaintiff's ECJ claims. The Court finds that Defendant's Motion for Partial Summary 2 Judgment is premature, prior to Plaintiff having the opportunity to take adequate discovery on 3 issues related to Defendant's safe harbor argument, and will defer ruling on Defendant's argument 4 at this time.

5 I. BACKGROUND

6 These parties have already gone through several rounds of motions to dismiss and 7 amendment to Plaintiff's complaint, and the background facts are familiar to the Court and the 8 parties. See generally Dismissal Order. In the Dismissal Order, Judge Davila outlined Plaintiff's 9 two theories of liability: first, that the defective packaging and labeling on Defendant's products 10 render them "misbranded," and thus per se unlawful under the UCL, and second, that Defendant's 11 product labels on the alleged offending products are fraudulent and misleading. See, e.g., id. at 5-12 6, 11-15. Judge Davila expressly rejected Plaintiff's first theory, stating that actual reliance is 13 required for claims under the UCL, and that mislabeling alone does not render a product violative 14 of the UCL. See id. at 12 ("[U]nder the 'unlawful' prong of the UCL, Plaintiffs must plead 15 reliance when claims are premised on allegedly deceptive advertising.")²

16 According to Plaintiff's TAC, Plaintiff Liddle is a California consumer who alleges that 17 she purchased eight of Defendant's Kirkland Signature food products: (1) Whole Dried 18 Blueberries, (2) Cashew Clusters with Almonds and Pumpkin Seeds, (3) Organic Chocolate 19 Reduced Fat Milk, (4) Canola Oil Cooking Spray, (5) Newman's Own 100% Grape Juice, (6) Real 20 Sliced Fruit – Fuji Apple, Strawberry Banana, and Fuji Apple with Cinnamon, (7) Boathouse
 21 Farms Organic 100% Carrot Juice, and (8) Ancient Grains Granola with Almonds. TAC, ECF 84
 22 ¶¶ 2a-2h. Plaintiff contends that the labels on these products contain various misrepresentations 23 that are misleading and deceptive to consumers, see id. at ¶¶ 6, 7, and alleges eight causes of 24

25 ² Defendant moves to strike certain portions of the TAC, arguing that Plaintiff has re-alleged this 26 rejected theory of liability. See Def.'s Mot. at 2. In Plaintiff's Opposition, she makes clear that she 27 "cannot simply drop the allegation [that misbranding renders a product per se unlawful, even 28 without actual reliance] from the complaint without running the risk of waiving the issue on appeal," because Judge Davila did not explicitly dismiss the theory "with prejudice." Def.'s Opp.
 at 7, 7 n.6. The Court does so now. See, e.g., Kwikset Corp. v. Superior Corp., 51 Cal. 4th 310 (2011); see also Kane v. Chobani, 2014 WL 6573000 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 20, 2014); Brazil v. Dole
Food Co., 935 F. Supp. 2d 947 (N.D. Cal. 2013).

1 action. See TAC ¶¶ 279-343.

2 On April 15, 2014, Plaintiff filed her TAC. On May 16, 2014, Defendant filed the instant
3 motion. Following briefing, the parties appeared for oral argument on August 14, 2014.

4 II. LEGAL STANDARD

5 A. Rule 12(b)(6)

6 A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) concerns what facts a plaintiff must plead on the 7 face of its complaint. Under Rule 8(a)(2) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a complaint 8 must include “a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to 9 relief.” Any complaint that does not meet this requirement can be dismissed pursuant to Rule 10 12(b)(6). In interpreting Rule 8(a)’s “short and plain statement” requirement, the Supreme Court 11 has held that plaintiffs must plead “enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its 12 face,” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007), which requires that “the plaintiff[s] 13 plead factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is 14 liable for the misconduct alleged.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). This standard does 15 not ask a plaintiff to plead facts that suggest they will probably prevail, but rather “it asks for more 16 than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id. (internal quotation marks 17 omitted). The Court must “accept factual allegations in the complaint as true and construe the 18 pleadings in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party.” Manzarek v. St. Paul Fire & 19 Marine Ins. Co., 519 F.3d 1025, 1031 (9th Cir. 2008). The Court is not, however, forced to 20 “assume the truth of legal conclusions merely because they are cast in the form of factual 21 allegations.” Kane v. Chobani, Inc., 973 F. Supp. 2d 1120 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (citing Fayer v.
22 Vaughn, 649 F.3d 1061, 1064 (9th Cir. 2011)).

23 III. DISCUSSION

24 A. Defendant’s Partial Motion to Dismiss

25 Defendant asks this Court to dismiss two newly alleged causes of action in Plaintiff’s 26 TAC: the seventh cause of action for violations of the implied warranty of merchantability, and the 27
28

1 eighth cause of action for negligent misrepresentation.³

2 I. Implied Warranty of Merchantability

3 “Unless excluded or modified[,] a warranty that goods shall be merchantable is implied in 4 a contract for their sale if the seller is a merchant with respect to goods of that kind.” Cal. Comm.
5 Code § 2314(1). This warranty does not demand that the product “precisely fulfill the expectation 6 of the buyer,” but rather “provides for a minimum level of quality.” Viggiano v. Hansen Natural 7 Corp., 944 F. Supp. 2d 877, 896 (C.D. Cal. 2013) (citing Hauter v. Zogarts, 14 Cal. 3d 104, 117 8 (1975)).

9 To state a claim under the implied warranty of merchantability, a party must plead that the 10 product in question “lacks even the most basic fitness for ordinary use.” Birdsong v. Apple, Inc., 11 590 F.3d 955, 958 (9th Cir. 2009). In the context of food cases, a party can plead that a product 12 violates the implied warranty of merchantability by alleging, for example, that the product was not 13 safe for consumption, see, e.g., Lam v. Gen. Mills, Inc., 859 F. Supp. 2d 1097, 1106 (N.D. Cal.
14 2012), or that the product was “contaminated or contained foreign objects.” Viggiano, 944 F.
15 Supp. 2d 877, 897; see also Brand v. Hyundai Motor Am., 226 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1545 (2014) 16 (describing the implied warranty of merchantability as a “bulwark against fundamental defects”).

17 Despite the length of the TAC,⁴ Plaintiff makes no allegation that any of the products in 18 question lacked a basic degree of fitness for ordinary use, or would in some way be unsafe for 19

20 _____
21 ³ Defendant also contends that Plaintiff’s newly alleged claims are procedurally improper, arguing 22 that Plaintiff was given leave to amend only with regard to “Plaintiff Liddle’s claim regarding 23 evaporated cane juice.” Def.’s Mot. at 4 (citing Dismissal Order at 17). As pointed out by Plaintiff, 24 however, Judge Davila’s Dismissal Order also includes stated that “[if] Plaintiffs wish to further 25 amend the complaint, the Court orders that it be pled . . . within 15 days of the date of this order.”
Dismissal Order at 17. There is no specific limiting language in the Dismissal Order that expressly precluded amendment, and as such the Court declines to reject Plaintiff’s new claims on this ground. The Court shall, however, make the permissibility of amendment clear to both parties in this and any future Order, and Plaintiff shall not be able to add further causes of action to a future amended Complaint without the explicit permission of this Court.

26 ⁴ Defendant’s TAC, at 81 pages, is rife with lengthy citations to websites, including myriad block 27 quotes pulled directly from the Internet. See, e.g., TAC ¶ 125. The TAC is not a “short and plain 28 statement” of the allegations against Defendant. See Rule 8(e)(1) (“[E]ach averment of a pleading shall be simple, concise, and direct.”). That Plaintiff may be subject to a heightened pleading standard for certain claims is no excuse for such longwinded and unwieldy allegations. See, e.g., McHenry v. Renne, 84 F.3d 1172, 1178 (9th Cir. 1996).

1 consumption by a consumer who purchased them. Plaintiff instead contends that the products 2 violate the implied warranty of merchantability because the products are misbranded and “could 3 not be legally sold or held.” Pl.’s Opp., ECF 93 at 2 (citing TAC ¶¶ 332-334). The Court is not 4 persuaded by this argument. Mislabeling of a product is not the sort of “fundamental defect” that 5 the implied warranty of merchantability is designed to protect against – instead, the warranty 6 hopes to protect consumers who purchase products that are not fit to be used in the way those 7 products are normally used – they are contaminated or lack any minimum level of quality such 8 that they would be unsafe for consumption. See, e.g., Lam, 859 F. Supp. 2d 1097, 1106. Plaintiff’s 9 allegations that the products are “illegal and unsellable,” TAC ¶¶ 345-346, is not enough to plead 10 a violation of the implied warranty of merchantability.

11 The Court therefore GRANTS Defendant’s Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff’s seventh cause of 12 action. Plaintiff shall, however, be given leave to amend in order to allege facts that would show 13 that the products in question lacked even the most basic fitness for everyday use.

14 2. Negligent Misrepresentation

15 Under California law, negligent misrepresentation “differs from intentional 16 misrepresentation in that, while certain nondisclosures may support a claim for intentional 17 misrepresentation, a negligent misrepresentation requires a ‘positive assertion,’ and hence 18 ‘omissions’ – that is, nondisclosures – cannot give rise to liability for negligent 19 misrepresentation.” Mitsui O.S.K. Lines, Ltd. v. SeaMaster Logistics, Inc., 913 F. Supp. 2d 780, 20 789 (emphasis added). Thus, while a failure to disclose information can give rise to intentional 21 misrepresentations, such failure to disclose cannot give rise to a claim for negligent 22 misrepresentation. Lopez v. Nissan N. Am., Inc., 201 Cal. App. 4th 572, 596 (2011); see also 23 Byrum v. Brand, 219 Cal. App. 3d 926, 941-42 (1990) (finding that negligent misrepresentations 24 require “something more than an omission”).

25 Plaintiff states in her Opposition that she has alleged misrepresentations “throughout the 26 TAC,” Pl.’s Opp. at 3, including “misrepresenting sugar as ECJ and non-natural products as 27 natural.” Id. Plaintiff directs the Court to three paragraphs that include these purported affirmative 28 misrepresentations, TAC ¶¶ 351-353.

1 None of these three paragraphs contain a single specific affirmative misrepresentation.
 2 Instead, both paragraphs 352 and 353 reassert Plaintiff's failure to disclose theory. See TAC ¶¶ 3 352-353 ("Defendants (sic) failed to fulfill its duty to disclose the material facts alleged above.").
 4 Paragraph 351, in contrast, purports to re-allege the previous 79 pages of allegations. Plaintiff may 5 have, somewhere in her 81-page TAC, alleged some affirmative misrepresentations. She was not, 6 however, able to cite in her Opposition to Defendant's Motion a single specific paragraph that 7 included any such affirmative misrepresentation. It is not the Court's job to look through the 8 incredibly lengthy TAC to find Plaintiff's misrepresentations for her – that, plainly, is the job of 9 the party opposing the motion to dismiss.

10 Because Plaintiff has not cited a single affirmative misrepresentation, and instead has 11 attempted to plead a negligent misrepresentation claim based on omissions, the Court GRANTS 12 Defendant's Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's eighth cause of action. However, the Court will grant 13 Plaintiff the opportunity to amend in order to specifically and clearly articulate a factual basis for 14 affirmative misrepresentations on Defendant's products.

15 B. Defendant's Motion to Dismiss or Stay Plaintiff's ECJ Claims

16 Defendant also asks the Court to dismiss, or in the alternative stay, Plaintiff's claims 17 relating to the use of the phrase Evaporated Cane Juice, or ECJ, on Kirkland's chocolate milk 18 product. Plaintiff contends that the use of ECJ on labeling is misleading and illegal, and that 19 Plaintiff Liddle purchased Defendant's chocolate milk product after "scann[ing] the ingredient list 20 for added sugar, but did not recognize 'evaporated cane juice' as added sugar." TAC ¶ 115; see 21 also id. at ¶ 116 ("Plaintiff [Liddle] was looking for words like 'sugar' or 'syrup' that ordinarily 22 identify ingredients as sugar. She was not looking for words like 'juice' or 'cane juice' or 23 'evaporated cane juice.'").

24 Defendant makes two arguments with regard to Plaintiff's ECJ claims. First, it contends 25 that Plaintiff's claims should be stayed or dismissed without prejudice under the primary 26 jurisdiction doctrine, because the Food and Drug Administration has reopened the comment period 27 on the Agency's 2009 draft guidance governing ECJ. See Def.'s Mot. at 16, 17 ("The primary 28 jurisdiction doctrine allows courts to dismiss a complaint or stay the proceedings without

1 prejudice pending the resolution of an issue within the special competence of an administrative 2 agency.”). Second, Defendant argues that Plaintiff’s ECJ claims should be dismissed, with 3 prejudice, as they are not adequately pled.

4 The primary jurisdiction doctrine applies in situations where there is: “(1) [a] need to 5 resolve an issue that (2) has been placed by Congress within the jurisdiction of an administrative 6 body having regulatory authority (3) pursuant to a statute that subjects an industry or activity to a 7 comprehensive regulatory authority that (4) requires expertise or uniformity in administration.”
8 Clark v. Time Warner, Inc., 523 F.3d 1110, 1115 (9th Cir. 2008).

9 The trend in this district, given the reopening of the FDA’s comment period, has been to 10 stay ECJ claims under the primary jurisdiction doctrine, though some judges have instead 11 dismissed the ECJ claims without prejudice. Compare Swearingen v. Santa Cruz Natural Inc., 12 2014 WL 2967585, at *3 (N.D. Cal. July 1, 2014) (compiling cases and noting that “several other 13 courts in this district have applied the doctrine of primary jurisdiction to actions involving similar 14 claims related [to] the use of the term ECJ on food labeling”), with Swearingen v. Yucatan Foods, 15 L.P., 2014 WL 2115790, at *2 (N.D. Cal. May 20, 2014) (dismissing without prejudice plaintiffs’ 16 case and noting that “[t]he question of evaporated cane juice labeling presents a host of technical 17 issues uniquely within the [FDA’s] expertise.”).

18 In this case, the ECJ claims make up a small portion of the overall case, because the ECJ 19 labeling allegations involve only one of the eight products at issue, the chocolate milk product. It 20 is likely that the FDA’s guidance after the closure of the comment period will provide the Court 21 and both parties necessary clarity on the propriety, if any, of using ECJ on product labels, and the 22 likelihood of such guidance supports a stay of the ECJ claims in this action. See Figy v. Lifeway 23 Foods, Inc., 2014 WL 1779251, at *4 (N.D. Cal. May 5, 2014) (noting that the FDA is likely to 24 make a final pronouncement on the issue of ECJ labeling, and that such likelihood of resolution 25 supports deferring judgment). The Court GRANTS Defendant’s request to stay only the ECJ 26 claims, pursuant to the primary jurisdiction doctrine, until the FDA issues final guidance after the 27 comment period closes.

28 The Court does note, however, that Plaintiff’s ECJ claims in this action seem implausible.

1 Plaintiff Liddle claims that she scanned the chocolate milk product's ingredient list for added
2 sugar, and, seeing only ECJ on the label, purchased the product. TAC ¶¶ 115-116. Plaintiff 3 contends that she "would not have bought the [chocolate milk product] had she known they (sic) 4 contained 'added sugar.'" TAC ¶ 171. In fact, Plaintiff Liddle claims that she believed that any 5 sugars included in the chocolate milk product "we naturally occurring sugars that were found 6 naturally in the ingredients used by Costco such as milk (lactose)." TAC ¶ 147.

7 Judge Davila's Dismissal Order stated that Plaintiff Liddle's ECJ allegations were 8 deficient because the SAC had "fail[ed] to allege what Plaintiff Liddle believed ECJ to be if not 9 sugar and [did] not explain what a reasonable person would believe ECJ to be." Dismissal Order, 10 ECF 83 at 15. Plaintiff's attempt to correct this deficiency in the TAC is unavailing for two 11 reasons. First, the TAC does not articulate what Liddle believed ECJ to be and once again does not 12 state what a reasonable person might have believed ECJ to be. Second, and perhaps more 13 fundamentally, the Court simply finds it implausible that a reasonable consumer could purchase a 14 chocolate milk product and believe that it only contained naturally occurring sugars "such as milk 15 (lactose)." TAC ¶ 147; see Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007) (holding that a 16 plaintiff must plead "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face").

17 The Court, for the reasons outlined above, GRANTS Defendant's request to stay Plaintiff's 18 ECJ claims, until the FDA issues final guidance after the ECJ comment period ends. In the event 19 the stay is lifted on the ECJ claims and Plaintiff seeks to reassert it, she shall request leave to 20 amend to cure the defects identified by the Court in this Order.

21 C. Defendant's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment

22 Finally, Defendant seeks partial summary judgment "on the basis that the safe harbor 23 provisions of the FDCA and Sherman Law prohibit Plaintiff's claims relating to products for 24 which Costco received vendor guarantees regarding quality and compliance." Def.'s Mot. at 1.
25 Defendant states that it received such guarantees for six of the eight products referenced in the 26 TAC (including the chocolate milk product at issue in Plaintiff's ECJ claims).

27 Plaintiff argues that she would need the opportunity to conduct relevant discovery prior to 28 any further briefing on this partial motion to summary judgment. See Pl.'s Opp. at 7. The Court

1 agrees with Plaintiff, and finds that the partial motion for summary judgment is premature.⁵ As 2 discussed with the parties at oral argument, see ECF 98 at 28-35 (hearing transcript), the Court
 3 will require that the parties create a discovery plan for proceeding on Defendant's Partial Motion 4 for Summary Judgment. The Court will thereafter provide Plaintiff the opportunity to file a 5 supplemental opposition to Defendant's motion, not to exceed ten pages, and Defendant will be 6 given the chance to file a supplemental reply, not to exceed seven pages. See ECF 98 at 30-31.

7 IV. ORDER

8 For the foregoing reasons, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

9 1. Defendant's Partial Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's seventh and eighth causes of 10 action is GRANTED, with leave to amend on these causes of action only. Plaintiff must file a 11 Fourth Amended Complaint no later than December 1, 2014. Plaintiff is not permitted to add any 12 new products or causes of action to her Fourth Amended Complaint without leave of Court.

13 2. Defendant's Motion to Stay Plaintiff's ECJ claims is GRANTED. Plaintiff's ECJ 14 claims are stayed until the FDA releases its final guidance, after the comment period closes on the 15 Agency's 2009 draft guidance regarding ECJ. Defendant is further ORDERED to provide the 16 Court notice when this occurs.

17 3. The Court DEFERS ruling on Defendant's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment.
 18 The parties shall meet and confer, and file with the Court a discovery plan for the motion for 19 partial summary judgment no later than November 24, 2014. After receipt of the parties' discovery 20 plan, the Court shall issue a schedule for briefing on Defendant's motion.

21 IT IS SO ORDERED.

22 Dated: November 12, 2014

23
 24 BETH LABSON FREEMAN
 United States District Judge

25 _____
 26 ⁵ This Court's standing order permits parties to file only one dispositive motion, such as a motion 27 for summary judgment. However, as stated at oral argument, the Court rules that Defendant is not 28 precluded from bringing a motion for summary judgment at a future point in this litigation. ECF 98 at 29 ("You have selected what I consider to be a well thought-out appropriate early motion for summary judgment on a clear legal issue. . . . I would grant, and do now by order . . . that you are not precluded from bringing a motion for summary judgment later in the proceedings.")