FINAL ORDER OF DISMISSAL

SHEARER'S FOODS, LLC, f/k/a Shearer's Foods, Inc., an Ohio
limited liability company,

Defendant.

THIS MATTER is before the Court sua sponte. The Court has carefully reviewed the entire court file herein and is otherwise fully advised in the premises.

The Court's jurisdiction in this matter is premised upon diversity jurisdiction, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d). That section of the United States Code provides that where a class action complaint is founded on diversity of citizenship, a federal court may maintain jurisdiction over the action only where "the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $5,000,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and is a class action in which (a) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a citizen of a State different from any defendant." 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2)(A).

The dictates of § 1332 moor federal courts to the jurisdictional limits prescribed by Article III, Section 2 of the Constitution. In Healy v. Ratta, 292 U.S. 263, 270 (1934), Justice Stone noted that "[d]ue regard for the rightful independence of state governments, which should actuate federal courts, requires that [federal courts] scrupulously confine their own jurisdiction to the precise limits which the statute has defined." Id. These limits stem from the fact that federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction. The presumption, in fact, is that a federal court lacks jurisdiction in a particular case until the parties demonstrate that jurisdiction over the subject matter exists. United States v. Rojas, 429 F.3d 1317, 1320 (11th Cir. 2005) (citing Turner v. Bank of N. Am., 4 U.S. (4 Dall.) 8, 10 (1799)). Therefore, the facts establishing the existence of jurisdiction must be affirmatively alleged in the complaint. Taylor v. Appleton, 30 F.3d 1365, 1367 (11th Cir. 1994); see 13B Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure: Jurisdiction 2d, § 3602 (1984).

A review of the Complaint (DE 1) reveals that the requisite diversity of citizenship between Plaintiff and Defendant is not apparent on its face. The Complaint states, in pertinent part:

15. Defendant, Shearer's Foods, LLC, promoted and marketed the Products at issue in this jurisdiction and in this judicial district. Shearer's Foods, LLC, is an Ohio Limited Liability Company with its principal place of business located in Massillon, Ohio 44646. Shearer's Foods, LLC, lists a Registered Agent with the Ohio Secretary of State as National Registered Agents, Inc., located at 1300 East Ninth Street, Cleveland, Ohio 44114. Shearer's Foods, LLC, has also done business during the Class Period as Shearer's Foods, Inc.

DE 1, ¶ 15.

The Complaint fails to sufficiently allege the citizenship of Defendant Shearer's Foods, LLC, in order for the Court to determine whether it has jurisdiction over the above-styled cause. The Court notes that “[a] limited liability company is a citizen of any state of which a member of the company is a citizen.” Rolling Greens MHP, L.P. v. Comcast SCH Holdings, L.L.C., 374 F.3d 1020, 1022 (11th Cir. 2004). The Complaint lacks allegations regarding the citizenship of all members of Defendant Shearer’s Foods, LLC. Therefore, because Plaintiff has failed to properly allege the citizenship of all Parties, it has not met the initial burden of establishing this Court’s jurisdiction over the above-styled cause. The Complaint’s failure to establish the diversity requirements necessary for this Court to exercise jurisdiction means that this case must be dismissed.

This case is easily distinguishable from the case of a Defendant who removes an action from state court on the basis of diversity jurisdiction, and the notice of removal fails to set forth the Court’s jurisdiction properly. In those instances, the Eleventh Circuit has held that such pleading requirements are procedural and not jurisdictionally significant and that the removing party must have an opportunity to cure the defect. Corp. Management Advisors, Inc. v. Artjen Complexus, 561 F.3d 1294, 1296-97 (11th Cir. 2009). The interplay of the removal rules in 28 U.S.C. §§ 1441, 1447 and their nuanced distinctions on the limits of and procedures for removal permit such a conclusion.

The same cannot be said of § 1332. It is as straightforward as can be and is grounded in Article III of the Constitution. No Court has read into the Constitution or § 1332 a procedural mechanism for establishing diversity jurisdiction. Appleton, 30 F.3d at 1367 (noting with approval, the district court's refusal to exercise jurisdiction over a case where diversity was not properly pled). Such a mechanism would, to say the least, be a judicially crafted rule, one that could not be reconciled with the long and established tradition of federal courts being courts of limited jurisdiction. See id.

In dismissing the above-styled cause due to Plaintiff's failure to satisfy the requirements of federal jurisdiction, the Court echoes the sentiment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit:

Are we being fusspots and nitpickers in trying (so far with limited success) to enforce rules designed to ensure that federal courts do not exceed the limits that the Constitution and federal statutes impose on their jurisdiction? Does it really matter if federal courts decide on the merits cases that they are not actually authorized to decide? The sky will not fall if federal courts occasionally stray outside the proper bounds. But the fact that limits on subject-matter jurisdiction are not waivable or forfeitable - that federal courts are required to police their jurisdiction - imposes a duty of care that we are not at liberty to shirk. And since we are not investigative bodies, we need and must assure compliance with procedures designed to compel parties to federal litigation to assist us in keeping within bounds. Hence [it is] . . . the responsibility of lawyers who practice in the federal courts, even if only occasionally, to familiarize themselves with the principles of federal jurisdiction.

Smoot v. Mazda Motors of Am., Inc., 469 F.3d 675, 678 (7th Cir.

2006).

Accordingly, after due consideration, it is

ORDERED AND ADJUDGED as follows:

1. The above-styled cause be and the same is hereby DISMISSED without prejudice in that the Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the same; and

2. To the extent not otherwise disposed of herein, all pending Motions are hereby DENIED as moot.

DONE AND ORDERED in Chambers at Fort Lauderdale, Broward County, Florida, this 27th day of May, 2014.
