Is Vemma A Pyramid Scheme?

Five Reasons Why Vemma is NOT a Pyramid Scheme

One: Pyramid Schemes are illegal in the United States. Vemma is doing hundreds of millions of dollars of business.

Two: Pyramid Schemes do not involve a tangible product or commodity. Vemma sells nutritional supplements! In order to join and qualify to start earning, you must purchase product, this ensures that commissions are based on SALES not on Recruiting!

Three: The Phoenix Suns, Charlotte Bobcats, and Phoenix Coyotes all have Verve as their official energy drink. The Phoenix suns even hired a team of eleven lawyers to investigate Vemma as a company because if it turned out to be fraudulent in any way, the Suns organization would be legally liable. These lawyers came to the conclusion that Vemma is a completely legal company!

Four: Dr.Oz, Chris Powell, and Shawn Merriam all publicly support and endorse Vemma. These superstars simply would not risk their reputation on an illegal pyramid scheme. Not only does fitness superstar Chris Powell endorse Vemma, he is currently building his own Vemma Business!

Five: Vemma is an equal opportunity company, meaning you can out earn the people above you. In illegal pyramid schemes, members are paid on levels, Vemma compensates based on total sales volume.
