My name is Jon Holbrook and this is my Thrive experience.

I wish to share a very special experience with you. I am an entrepreneur and businessman. Furthermore I am a husband, the father of four and grandfather to four with one more due to arrive soon.

For thirty-five years I have had the distinct privilege of working with so many wonderful people in finance, banking, hospitality and the past five years, in direct sales with a company that I love very much. In November 2013 I retired from my executive rolls to focus on my family and my health. For most of my life I have focused on work, spending time with family when possible, but instinctively pursuing my goals and mentoring as many people as possible in an effort to see them become successful.

In my lifetime I have experienced a transition from the wolf mentality, win at all cost mentality to having compassion and love for my fellow man. I believe in the principle that people matter, money doesn't. By doing the right thing helping people get what they want we can get what we want too.

Over the course of my life's journey I have had many health challenges. I have been dealing with joint discomfort. I am also overweight and out of shape. I have also been working through some health challenges concerning my knee. I always carry paper towels in my pocket to wipe the perspiration from my face, neck and hair. I often feel exhausted. My appearance is also something I am mindful of; I am embarrassed when it looks like I just took a shower with all my clothes on due to the effects of my health challenges.

My daily nutrition is out of balance too, certainly not because my dear wife; she provides well-balanced meals with appropriate portions at home and when dining out. Stress also plays a factor. We all have it and it without question has dramatic effects on my overall health and wellness. I worry about my family, friends and associates continually. Often I see the good in everyone and believe in others before they believe themselves. Family is and always will be my priority for the rest of my life.

My eldest son, Houston has AML leukemia but he has proven to me that all things are possible and he lives because he has the desire to regardless of what anyone including medical professionals say the past sixteen months. His dedication to get better and work hard motivates me. He makes no excuses; just focusing on getting better and defeating cancer. My wife and daughter-in-law take exceptional care of him and push their bodies to the limit both physically and mentally by living at the hospital for months at a time. Each and every day brings new challenges that test me as a father and as a man.

Often I say tomorrow w [REDACTED] seriously, what's the rush? I have prior commitments and always so many things to do. My business partners who call me out and challenge me to get healthy, they offer encouraging words and by example by exercising and asking me to join them. I also decline, I tell myself that I am only fifty-three years old, so I have time and can get around to it eventually, but what if tomorrow never comes.

My Le-Vel introduction didn't happen by chance, my son Dexter a fantastic networker has two very good friends promoting and using the Thrive products. Dexter after observing them for six months and evaluating their success agreed to try the products. Dexter approached me and challenged me to accept the eight week Le-Vel challenge just as he had. It was easy to see he truly believed in the products, so I agreed to take the challenge and purchased product.

After five days taking the products consisting of capsules, shakes and the DFT foam (Derma Fusion Technology) applied to the skin as per the directions on an empty stomach, both my wife and I noticed a difference as did my business partners, in my mobility. After only two weeks I feel great! My joint discomfort has decreased significantly!
