Okay you guys are going to think I am crazy. My Grandmother is on Chemotherapy for Multiple Myeloma. She has been taking the Reserve and Finity by Jeunesse for about 3 weeks now. Yesterday her blood was drawn and the White Blood Cell count that was critically low is now above normal. She was taking 3-4 Laxatives a day due to the chemo causing terrible constipation. Now she doesn't need it daily. Coincidence? I don't think so. I really do believe the Reserve is a wonderful product.

How does Jeunesse Reserve help prevent cancer?
Resveratrol starves cancer cells by inhibiting the action of a key protein that feeds them. The protein, called nuclear factor- kappa B (NF-kB), is found in the nucleus of all cells and activates genes responsible for cell survival. Research demonstrated that cancer cells treated with resveratrol died because they became sensitive to a compound called Tumor Necrosis Factor alpha (TNFa). Resveratrol initiated a reaction in the NF-kB molecule that caused the cancer cells essentially to self-destruct in a process called apoptosis.

Resveratrol:
Can deeply penetrate the center of a cell's nucleus, allowing the DNA to repair free radical damage that might otherwise contribute to cancerous growth.
Has anti-inflammatory properties that help prevent certain enzymes from forming that trigger tumor development.
Helps cut down cell reproduction and reduce the number of cell divisions that could contribute to the progression of cancer cell growth.

- Danieland Robin Kirby I just looked at link and it makes me wonder if this would help miah Cece Owens! scroll all way to bottom and there are some testimonies. One of them mentioned being on dialysis, after taking the reserve she didn't have to anymore! It also showed pics of kids drinking this so I would think it would be ok for her to drink!
