Revive Your Immune System With Agel UMI

Written by: Yaron

If you find that you're often getting colds and other ailments, it may be that your immune system is compromised.

Lack of sleep, a poor diet, and a stressful lifestyle can all contribute to the decline of the immune system, leading to low energy and frequent illness. But there are natural ways to help give your immune system the boost it needs.

Read on for a review of Agel UMI, a natural seaweed supplement that can help boost your immune system and keep those pesky germs away.

Agel UMI is a suspension gel

technology supplement made from fucoidan-rich brown seaweed.

This nutrient has long been touted as the path to a long and healthy life by island and coastal cultures throughout the world. Asian cultures, in particular, use seaweed as a fundamental part of a nutritional diet.

Fucoidan promotes the production of white blood cells, which are a cornerstone of a healthy immune system. This plant compound works by signaling the immune system to react to harmful bacteria, germs and viruses.

Agel UMI also contains iodine and apple cider vinegar, both of which are used for immune system support. Iodine is also a necessary source for developing and promoting cognitive function.

Agel UMI enables tissue and organ regeneration, helps maintain healthy blood flow and heart function, assists in eliminating harmful cells, and supports proper kidney and liver function.

Where Does Agel UMI Come From?

Agel UMI is made by Agel, an international leader in gel-based nutritional products. Using these time-tested ingredients, Agel has created a dosage delivery system called suspension gel technology that provides maximum benefit to support and bolster a healthy immune system.

This means that when you take Agel UMI, it is absorbed into your system more quickly and works more effectively than a pill or powder. Plus, it has a great tasting apple flavor!

Scientific Summary

& CURRENT USE

UMI contains a complex carbohydrate compound called fucoidan which is found in the Brown Seaweed, Laminaria japonica. Fucoidan is classified as a sulfur containing polysaccharide molecule.

Fucoidan is a bioactive plant compound that modulates a healthy immune system by signaling proteins, enzymes and other immune elements to react to foreign bacteria, germs, virus and other substances. Much of the research on fucoidan centers on cancer, antimicrobial, and other drug applications. Cancer and other medical claims cannot be made for UMI and Agel dietary supplements. The role of fucoidan as an ingredient in food or dietary supplements can be discussed by Agel Team Members. For example, fucoidan has been demonstrated to provide healthy (normal) cellular support, immune support and cellular regulation. Fucoidan has been demonstrated to detoxify the body and inhibit free radicals to support wellness.

The immune system is complex and multi-dimensional. To have an effective immune system over-all health and vitality are required. Multiple processes and structures are components of a normal immune system. The immune system includes physical barriers to prevent the entry of germs, bacteria, fungi, viral particles, and harmful chemicals from entering the body. After a foreign substance has entered the body, the immune response can include killer cells, white blood cells, macrophage among others. Multiple defense mechanisms including the innate and adaptive immune systems are part of an effective immune system. An important element of the immune system is to distinguish the body's healthy normal cells from foreign substances and foreign cells. Although drugs and pharmaceutical prescriptions may be required by medical intervention to provide a defense against germs and related disease, there are non-drug strategies that can be used to support a healthy immune system.

Elements of supporting a healthy & vital Immune system

- 1 Adequate rest and deep sleep. Our immune system is strengthened and replenished as we sleep.
- 2 Avoid environmental exposure to germs, pollution, harmful chemicals.
- 3 Moderate exercise will enhance the immune system, but extreme exercise may have a deleterious impact to the immune system.
- 4 Avoid stress. Effectively manage stressful situations.
- 5 Agel UMI and complementary supplement use
- 6 A healthy diet will help you stay fit
- 7 Positive belief and attitude
