One of my goals this weekend when I'm teaching doctors in Novi , Michigan is to make them aware that prescription medications are one of the leading causes of death's in the US. Doctors can choose safer and natural approaches. I would love to see my colleagues GO WILD, GO EXTREME and GO KYANI.

John Delphen Dr Qutab, you should be very cautious when posting things such as this. There have been instances where Kyani distributors have suggested that prescription drugs can be replaced by Kyani products. This is extremely dangerous to do and individuals without a medical degree can be prosecuted for causing the harm or death of someone for suggesting this. Sure, you have mentioned that doctors may consider alternatives but I'm sure there will be instances where this message will be lost in translation.

Kyani's own disclaimer suggests that "statements and products referenced in this site have not been evaluated by the United States Food and Drug Administration (FDA). The Kyani products are not intended to diagnose, treat, cure or prevent any disease or condition. The information in this site is intended as a source of reference materials and scientific data for educational purposes only. If you have any diagnosed medical condition we recommend you consult your individual health care provider with specific questions before using any new dietary supplement."

Dr Abbas Qutab John, I agree . I will make a post . Any medical condition has to be evaluated and diagnosed by a physician. That's not my intent to make them believe that. Quiet a lot of physicians are looking and using alternatives in their practice so patients can find these doctors very easily but distributors are not trained to do it.

John Delphen No worries Dr Qutab. I know you mean well. It's just concerning at the number of distributors who have suggested that kyani products can replace prescription medication. I am unsure if these people realise how much trouble they could potentially find themselves in if harm is caused.

I also posted elsewhere. Could you please tell me where I can find any information about trials involving Kyani products? Anything published in peer reviewed journals?

Dr Abbas Qutab Kyani hasn't published in peer review journals. They keep all the detail of the research projects with them. Right now they are in the growth phase . I and my group can easily help them to get published . I am a part owner of www.adnabresearch.com. We are the largest group doing pharmaceutical trials and getting published in the main medical industry so if Kyani decides I have access to thousands of MD's who can do the trials and publish. It's a pretty close group industry. The problem is in nutritional products there is not enough profit margin to spend all that money . The ROI of nutrition is almost none then an approved drug.
