Melanoma vs Norvel M

Norvel had a brown spot on his forehead for the past two years. His doctor said it was nothing to worry about but his daughter urged him to see a dermatologist. The spot turned out to be malignant melanoma. Melanoma is an easily treatable cancer if caught at an early stage; otherwise it spreads to the lungs, heart, kidneys, and other organs. Even though the spot had been there for a substantial amount of time, the surgeon said it was isolated to one location.

Now for the commercial – Norvel's been taking PhytoDefense (3 Carotenoids, 2 Flavonoids, and 1 Cruciferous) daily since it's release. Don Lawson felt the melanoma remained isolated because of the defenses built up in Norvel's immune system – thanks to PhytoDefense. Many cancers grow silently in the body. You don't feel them, they don't itch, they don't hurt, they don't bleed. By the time you realize they're there, it's too late! Norvel starts out each and every day thankful to GNLD for his life!

Subject: Great News!

Good Morning, Merenna, just had to share with you some exciting news. This is day 11 for a lady (who has cancer throughout her entire body, she is being cared for my hospice so you know she has been given less than 3 months to live) who started the cancer program and her husband called this morning to let me talk with her. I couldn't believe my ears, in just these 11 days, she is able to pull herself up in the bed, able to help get out of the bed and was able to walk (with help, of course) to the bathroom! She actually had hope her voice and said she felt better. This woman was not even strong enough to talk with me 11 days ago!!!! Anyway, this is what keeps me in the business. Mona

"Cancer is a protein foreign to the body. However, the immune system cannot always recognize cancer as a foreign protein. The cancer cells 'hide' in the body, thereby giving the cancer cells time to proliferate throughout the system. Supplementation of antioxidants, such as those in Carotenoid Complex, can strengthen the immune system. As carotenoids boost the body's ability to identify cancer cells, more natural killer cells are produced. The body then sends the natural killer cells to the cancer site. Because Carotenoid Complex strengthens the immune function, it helps the body prevent cancer."
