Stratford Career Institute and the Federal Trade Commission Agree to Settle Dispute

Stratford Career Institute and the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) have reached a settlement relating to the marketing of SCI's high school course.

Stratford consistently had explained the scope and limitations of its high school course, but has now added additional clarification in the marketing of this effective course in response to the FTC's concerns. These steps fulfill terms of the settlement to which it has agreed. As it always has, Stratford will continue to ensure that it provides valuable and affordable career training programs.

This settlement does not involve an admission of any of the FTC's allegations.

The FTC's action focused exclusively on the high school course and did not affect or implicate any of the many other career training programs offered
