Received unwanted junk mail titled "Account notice", yet I do not own an account here. Scam promotional tactics.

Full of Sh*t
Mailer said Approved for a business loan.

Chris Owen gave me the run around for 6 days with a new story why the loan wasn't deposited. Then finally says "he doesn't see a way it will work".

Absolute bullshit and a waste of time.

I did borrow a 'modest' amount from this company for my small business, only $7,500 but after all said and done the payback is far more than twice that with fees. It was quick relief with long-term pain and actually hurt my business in the end. Will be paid off in a few weeks and glad of it - won't make this mistake twice. Service staff are very nice and wonderful, terms of the loans will drive you out of business. Be careful.

Called and ask some questions and decided not to go with them due to their over priced interest rate and lending terms. Now Andrew from Reliant Funding sends me daily requested do DocuSign so they can move forward. What part of NO don't they understand?

SCAM ALERT!

From Reliant Funding, "who don't even bother to print their business name on their junk mail".

From: 9540 Towne Center Dr. Suite 200 San Diego, CA 92121

Harassed by continue junk mail regarding credit cards in a bogus company name. Chosen Gernerall Contg Serv Inc. Spoke with a rep who said they would remove the name and address from their system. Months later still receiving junk mail.

I've written letters to plead and request to remove address & STOP junk mail. Continued to be harassed by this company by junk mail and opened credit accounts.

Bad Business.

We are on those Do Not Contact lists specifically because we do not feel comfortable getting credit lines in the mail. There is a great deal of mail theft in our area and the independent contractors used in this area do not deliver mail accurately.

Opening an envelope with a large credit line offered, along with what looks to be a real credit card with my husband's name on it is exactly what is not supposed to be arriving in the mail after we signed up to be on the Opt Out or Do Not Contact lists.

Aren't these companies supposed to be checking these Do Not Contact or Opt Out lists before sending out loan or credit line offers?

I don't appreciate the frequent junk mail to my business address. They make their mail look like something official from a government office, like a check with the tear-off strips, and don't put the business name on the envelope. They might be awesome at what they do, but I don't appreciate those who waste my time. Hoping they see this and change their marketing materials. :)

Husband received one of these pre-qualified "credit cards" at his place of work. The letter was open and his name, the pin number, and credit card number was exposed to whoever opened it. The card says it is not an actual credit card, but we don't know for sure if someone could actually open an account by calling the number listed and using my husband's name and "credit account number" provided on the card. I understand this is a way to market their product, but identity theft is very real, and a person's name or any other identifying information should not be used. The letter sent with the card looks like it is a real account that one might have and an unsuspecting person might call to "activate it". This kind of marketing is deceptive. We wouldn't want to do business anyway with any company that uses such deceptive practices.

Spoke with a rep on the phone, needed some quick gap funding of less then $40k. When I asked about the terms is when the concerns began. He said he needed to collect all my info before he could give me terms. I said I understand but Ill need to have some idea before I provide you with my credit information. He said "were not a bank and we can't just give you made up numbers". I explained I'm not looking for made up numbers, I'm looking for some estimated terms based on the amount I'll need to borrow and the time in which I will need it. This is when the guy clearly started to become agitated! When companies get choked up at the point you start asking about their terms, its never a good sign. The guy got rude and tried to impress upon me that I might not be worthy of their financing. This is a very unique way of soliciting new business. Clearly its amateur hour at Reliant!

SCAM! Received one of their pre-qualified credit cards. Naturally very concerned that I'd somehow either been hacked or signed up inadvertently. Then I Googled them. Tried to contact them online but their site never works. They've had a ton of negative BBB reviews. Stay away and pass the word
