Ironic lack of focus in this company's employees

July 29, 2018

Verified Purchase

I'm not convinced this product is doing anything. Maybe I'm swayed by the fact that there were typographical errors on the label: They list a "serving size" as two (2) capsules, with 30 servings per container of 60, but the directions say to "take one (1) capsule a day", not two. Also the herb St. John Wort is listed, but the correct name is St. John's Wort. There are a couple other technical spelling errors which may seem too nit-picky, but my opinion is that if you are going to market any kind of medication or supplement, you better be dead-on with every detail regarding name, strength, and directions for use. If you can't even spell your own ingredients right, are the milligram amounts also incorrect?....Which is ironic for a company marketing a product that allegedly "boosts memory, focus & clarity", "enhances brain function", and provides "cognitive enhancement". Either they don't use their own product or it really doesn't work at all.
