"If I Had to Put ALL My Money into ONE Stock, It's This"

Stansberry's most secretive analyst comes forward – says he believes ONE stock could beat everything he's recommended in 20 years… and has the chance to soar 1,000% beginning immediately…

A couple years ago, I granted an unusual on-camera interview.

A five-person production crew flew 2,400 miles across the country to film it – in my home.

I typically hate that kind of thing. I say "no" 9 times out of 10.

But this was different. I'd spotted something so promising that I had to speak up or I wouldn't be able to sleep at night.

I've never – ever – felt so strongly about getting one single idea out to the public.

Then 2020 came along. Everything changed. The video got put on the back burner.

And for nearly two years now, this rare interview footage has essentially sat in a vault.

Until today.

I practically demanded that my publisher finally release the tape, right now.

Along with a full update from me, of course.

If you're newer to Stansberry Research… or missed what I said back then for any reason…

Please, pay attention now.

You are the reason I've come forward again today.

And I think you'll be making the biggest financial mistake of your life if you don't at least consider what I'm about to show you.

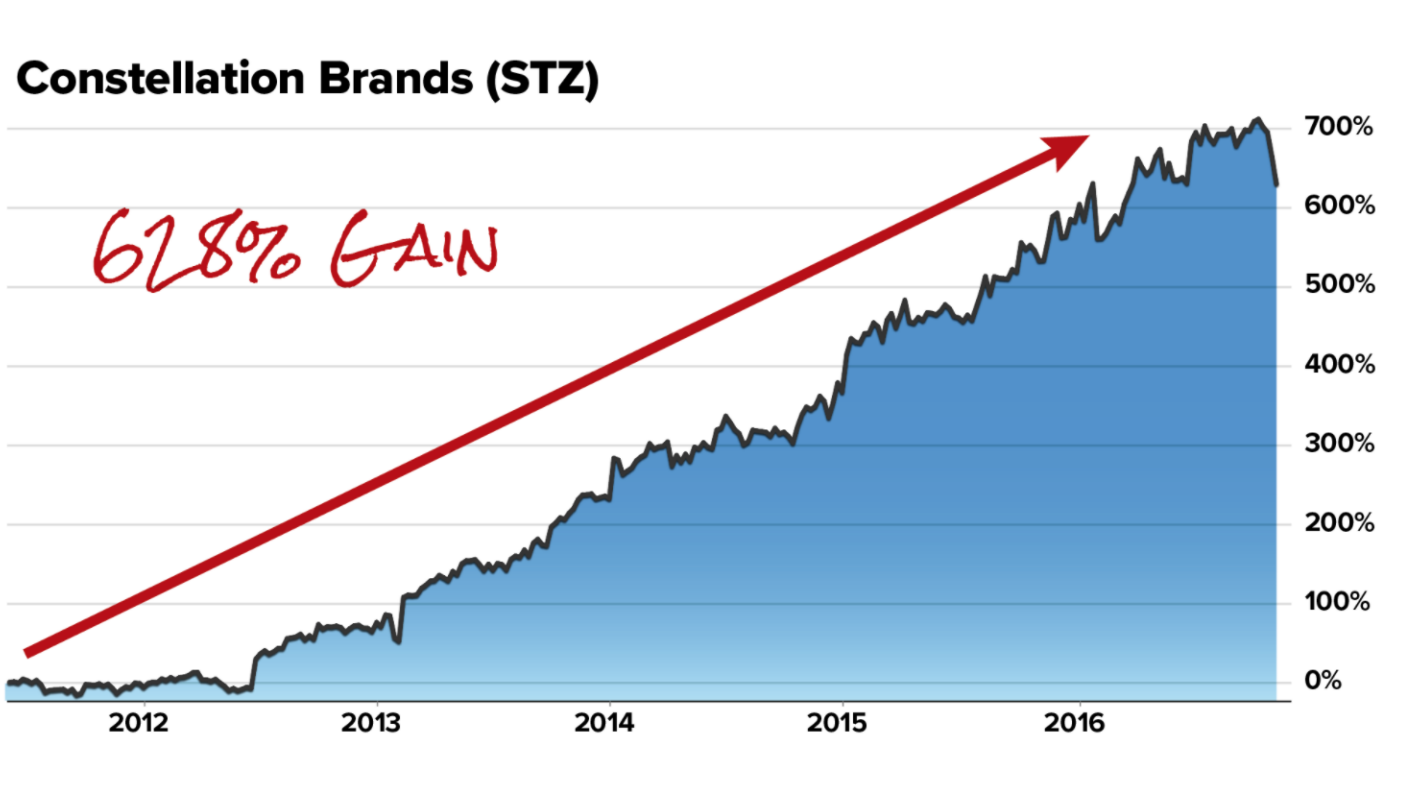
I don't say that lightly.

This could be the single biggest financial opportunity I've ever uncovered.

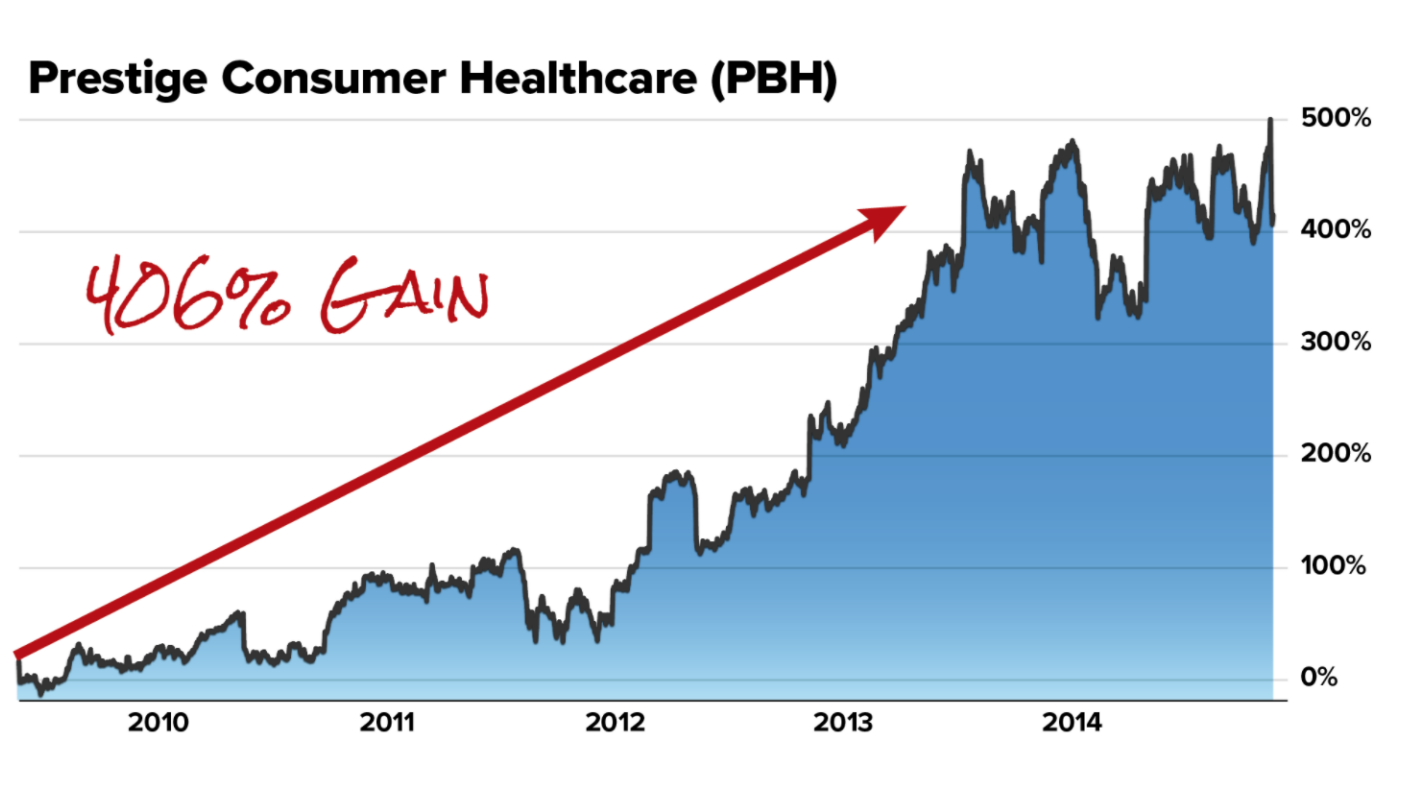
I predict it could climb as much as 10 fold in the coming years as the prices of gold and silver continue to rise… if it's not bought out first.

Normally, I don't play "favorites" with my recommendations.

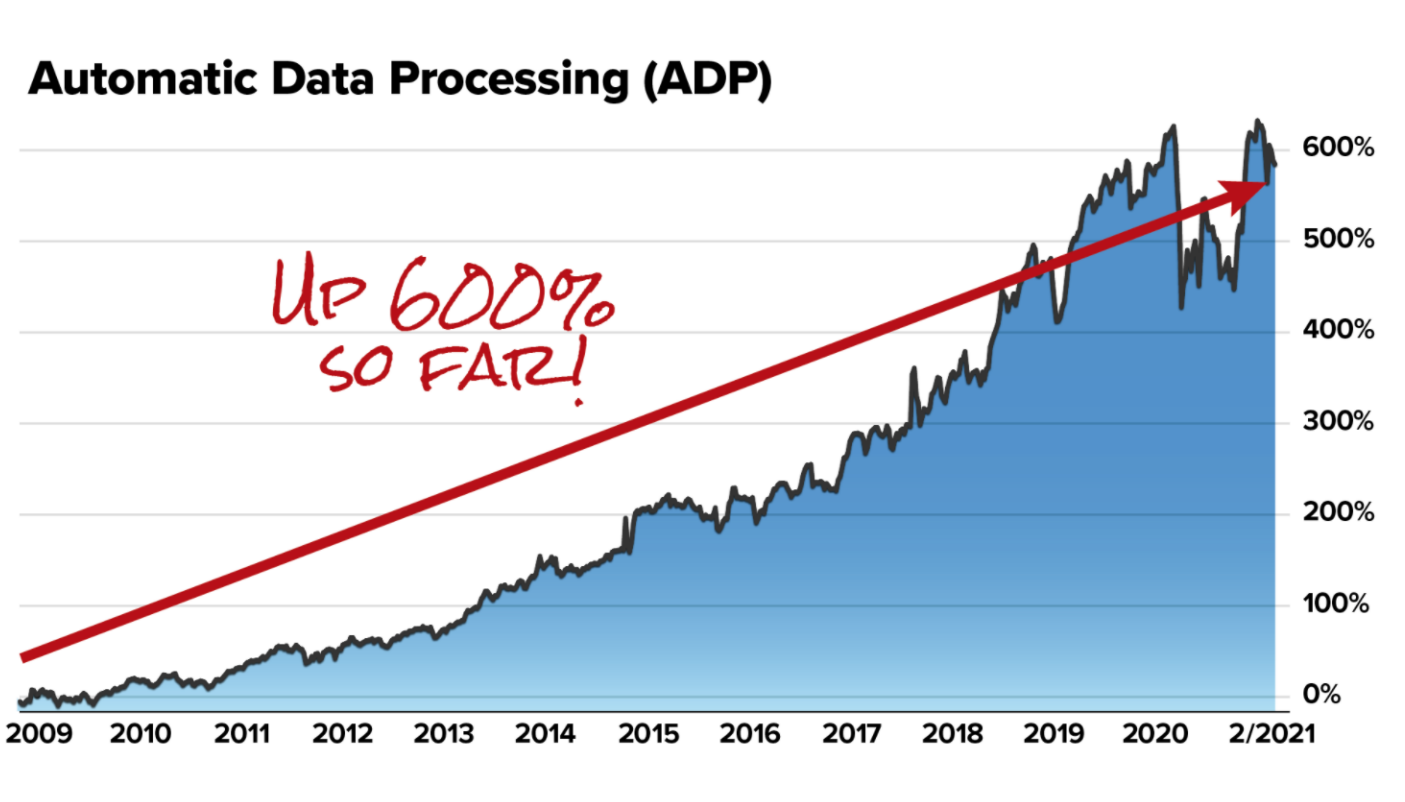
Like the 628% gain I showed readers on Constellation Brands (STZ)…



The 406% gain on Prestige Brands (PBH)…



Or our open gain of 600% on ADP as I write this…



But this new recommendation could be better than anything I've shared in my career.

I stake my reputation on it.

It's my No. 1 recommendation.

Not just for 2021, mind you…

It's the No. 1 stock recommendation in my 20-year career.

Hands down.

As you'll see, the upside could arrive very quickly in 2021.

But that's not why I love it. Not by a long shot. I've never been interested in short-term prognosticating. It's a fool's game.

As you'll see – the potential in this extraordinary and unique stock is not based on any assumptions about where the overall market will go next.

My best suggestion is that you buy this stock and essentially forget about it.

Because to me, this is the "holy grail"…

I believe this has 1,000% long-term potential – in a low-risk, low-volatility stock that could soar in a "Melt Up"… and potentially do even better when stocks inevitably break down.

I consider this stock a "one-and-done" way to make sure you don't miss out on the upside of gold or cryptos over the coming years.

Buy it and I believe you can rest easy knowing you aren't missing out on the upside in either one… without ever going near a speculative gold miner or a cryptocurrency exchange.

The upside potential is every bit as electric as in cryptos… gold stocks… SPACs… or tech stocks.

But with a fraction of the risk because of a totally different, cash-gushing business model…

Quietly taking in a piece of a MASSIVE market that never goes out of favor.

See, I'm considered one of Stansberry Research's most "conservative" analysts.

I've shown my readers the chance for extraordinary results while raising the alarm about one speculative bubble after another.

So I hope you understand why I had to come forward now… release my "lost" interview… and get this information in front of as many readers as possible.

It's maybe once or twice per decade that I see an opportunity anywhere near this good… with the potential for hundreds – if not THOUSANDS – of percent upside and limited risk.

And I believe this one beats them all.

That's why I'm saying things I've never said about any other opportunity in 20 years.

In short – if I had to put ALL my money in just one stock – this would be it…

628% Gains from Being "Conservative"

My name is Dan Ferris.

I was the first analyst Porter Stansberry hired at Stansberry Research over 20 years ago.

I publish a high-end research service called Extreme Value… and host the Stansberry Investor Hour podcast.

And I'm responsible for some of the highest gaining recommendations in our company's history, including 628% on Constellation Brands… and around 600% so far on ADP as of early February

The average gain on my open recommendations is as high as 252% as I write this.

All told, I've shown readers more than 20 opportunities to see at least triple-digit gains.

And while I don't relish the public spotlight – it absolutely thrills me to hear from readers I've been able to empower with these ideas…

Like Jacob S., who said:

> "Your style fits my 'sleep at night' desire."

Phil C., who wrote:

> "Has Extreme Value changed my financial outlook? Only if you think making money is better than losing money! When I first read about your tedious methodology (researching 4000 stocks manually, one at a time), I realized that you had an edge that no one else would ever duplicate."

And Pat G., who said:

> "I'd rather have Dan's advice than that of anyone else, and find myself continually weeding out the "good picks" of others which don't go anywhere. Thank you for a great job."

I have to admit… it baffles me that I've shown readers this kind of success…

And personally uncovered some of the biggest gains in the history of Stansberry.

Yet I still get pigeon-holed as a "conservative" analyst.

It's definitely true that my first rule is to not lose money.

Everything I do follows from that.

I don't have a clue why it would be controversial.

Most people treat the market like a slot machine.

If you're looking for someone to rile you up about pumping your savings into the latest speculative mania – I'm definitely not that guy.

Over the years I've learned that my research tends to appeal to a particular set of people.

Folks who've tried the "slot machine" approach and realized it just doesn't work. And who've woken up to the fact that they can make far more with far less stress by buying great businesses at great prices.

Is that easy?

Of course not.

But our results speak for themselves.

Now I've found an opportunity I believe has bigger upside than anything I've recommended in 20 years.

With the kind of upside you rarely see outside of wild speculations – in a company that's a financial fortress.

Here's what I said when I let those cameras into my home before the pandemic.

The interviewer was Jared Kelly, who's hosted events and urgent subscriber briefings for our company for years…

> Jared Kelly: But that brings up a big question. You are implying this stock is extremely low risk.
>
> Dan Ferris: I'm TELLING you it is. It has very limited downside. I consider it one of the lowest risk opportunities anywhere in the markets today.
>
> Jared Kelly: But you're also saying it's a potential 20 bagger. That kind of risk profile… and that kind of upside – they don't seem to go together.
>
> Dan Ferris: I'll show you why they do. But it's critical you understand something.
>
> I'm a value investor.
>
> I reread chapter 20 of the value investing bible The Intelligent Investor every month. It's the chapter called "Margin of Safety."
>
> And I never go near any investment that doesn't present a huge, glaringly obvious margin of safety.
>
> That's my No. 1 requirement, before I even think about what the upside might be.
>
> Jared Kelly: And this stock that you're talking about has a big margin of safety?
>
> Dan Ferris: Huge. So when I say this is a stock you want to own right now – let me be clear. I'd recommend this business at this price in a bull market.
>
> I'd recommend it if I were 100% certain that Steve Sjuggerud is right and we're about to have a huge "melt up" before things get bad.
>
> And I'd recommend right in the middle of a 2008-style bloodbath, or worse.

I'll show you a lot more from this interview in a moment.

But here's the thing…

If anything I'm saying today sounds like promotional bluster to you, go ahead and turn off this video right now.

Because the fact is, I hate advertising as much as you do.

I rarely promote my ideas to the public at all, much less stake my entire reputation on one single opportunity the way I'm doing today.

I absolutely have to do this. And I guarantee this entire video is worth your time.

But if you disagree, no problem.

Just keep in mind, I don't expect this message to stay online for long. I'm hardly one to hog the spotlight.

Very soon, I'll go back to my private life in the Pacific Northwest… and share my findings exclusively with the small group of like-minded folks who enjoy the chance to make money without gambling on the hysterical "can't miss" craze trending online and in the media.

But since you're here, right now, I won't waste another second.

So let me repeat: My conviction about this opportunity is unlike anything I've ever felt before, period.

And while no investment is ever risk-free… I believe this could have the biggest margin of safety you'll ever find in the market, with the chance for such massive upside.

This opportunity could double or triple your money without anything extraordinary happening.

I believe it's also definitely a candidate to be bought out at two or three times its current price.

But to me, that's the conservative case.

It doesn't require anything extraordinary to happen – for the company or the overall market.

But if this company doesn't get bought out in the next couple years, I expect it could grow by 500% or more, simply because it generates so with gold prices elevated.

One key revenue stream for this company grew 1,440% in a single year from 2009 to 2010 as gold surged. And that's exactly the kind of thing I'm expecting could happen again.

In a gold mania like I expect we could see in the next few years… 1,000% gains wouldn't surprise me.

With the most lopsided tradeoff between risk and reward that I've ever seen.

The reason involves a business model that's shown Stansberry readers the chance for an absolute fortune over the years…

The Most Powerful Income Stream on Earth

I'm talking about royalties.

Royalties dates back to the middle ages. In Great Britain all minerals – even in the ground – were the property of the British crown.

To extract anything, you had to first make a payment – a royalty.

Luckily, you no longer have to be a king to collect royalties. Most people simply don't know it's possible.

Which is one reason these little-known payments have been one of the most beloved and lucrative secrets our research firm has shared in the last 20 years.

A "royalty" is a payment you receive over and over again from a single asset.

You can either buy a royalty-paying asset with cash… or you can earn royalties from something you created yourself… like a book.

Once you own a royalty-producing asset, you never have to spend another penny.

And you can keep collecting profits – worth many times more than your original investment – for years, or even decades.

But new opportunities to get in on these potentially lifelong income streams don't come around very often.

The secret of the royalty business is having the knowledge and discipline to tap into a stream of royalties worth far more than the upfront cost to acquire them.

Companies that know how to do this are some of the best investments on earth.

In the past couple of decades, for example, royalty businesses have popped up in all sorts of industries.

- For example, Mills Music Trust (MMTRS), which collects royalties on a catalogue of 25,000 copyrighted songs… up 1,125% since it first started trading.
- Ligand Pharmaceuticals (LGND), which earns royalties on popular drugs… up 1,228% in the last 10 years.
- The A&W Revenue Royalties Income Fund (AW.UN), which collects a royalty on every sale at restaurants using the A&W brand name… up 481%, including dividends, since its debut.

Then there's the Mesabi Trust (MSB). It's one of the most boring businesses you can imagine…

All it does is collect royalties on the production of iron at a single mine in Minnesota.

But it's up 1,164% in the last five years…

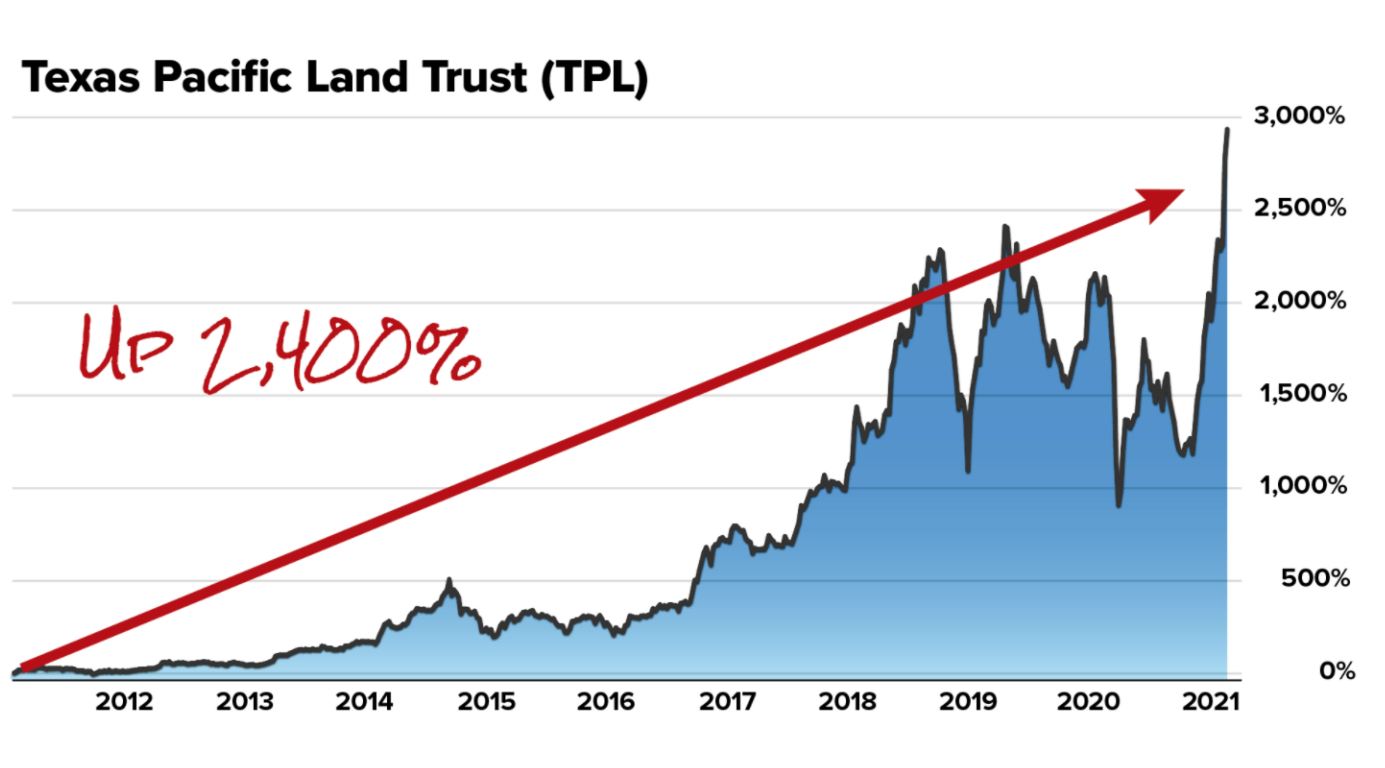
Then there's Texas Pacific Land Trust (TPL), which owns on a giant swath of oil-rich land in Texas. TPL doesn't do any of the work of building rigs and extracting oil. It lets other folks do that, and simply collects a stream of royalty payments in exchange.

But just from this dead-simple business, TPL is up 2,400% in the last 10 years…



Longer term, the gains are astonishing…

Back in the early 1990s, you could have bought shares of TPL for less than $3. Today it trades for more than $800.

Including dividends, that's a total gain of more than 37,000%… enough to turn every $5,000 invested into $1.8 million.

You get the point.

Acquiring royalty interests is one of the all-time great businesses.

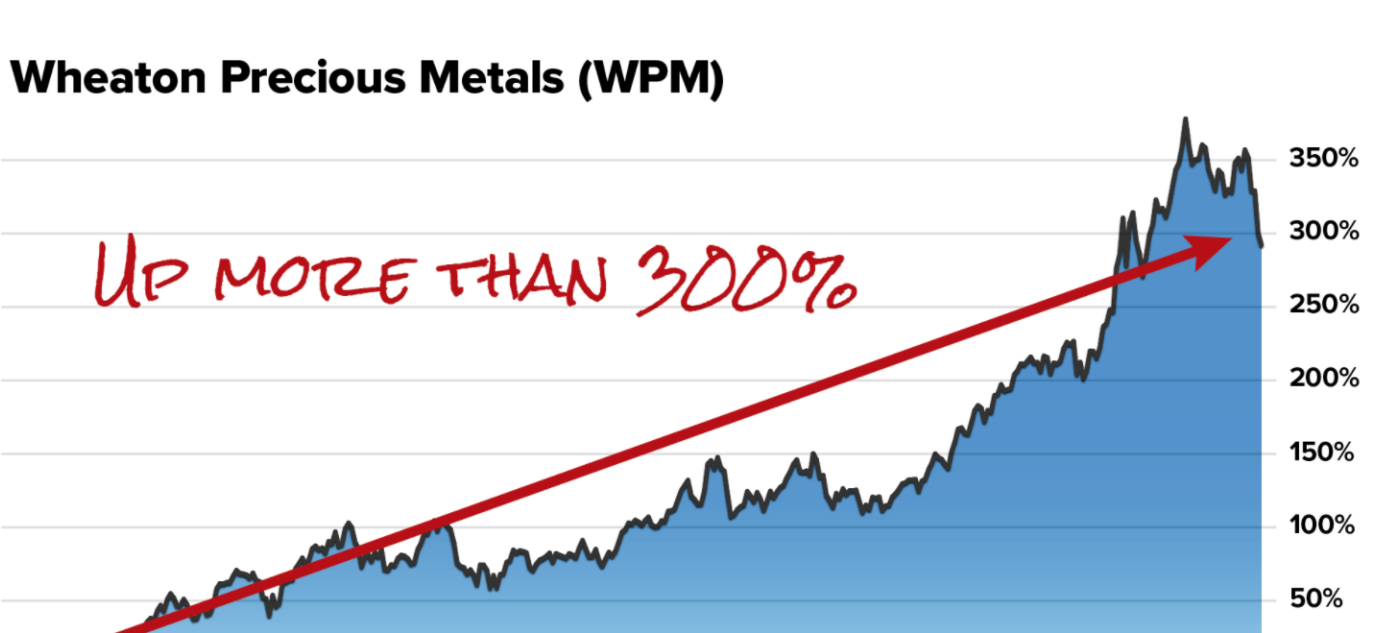
Of course, some of the biggest gains in the royalty world have come from precious metals like gold and silver.

I'm talking about companies like Franco-Nevada, Royal Gold, and Wheaton Precious Metals.

These companies do not own or operate mines. They simply make an upfront investment in mining assets in exchange for a cut of everything that comes out of the ground at a particular site.

And they've given Stansberry subscribers the chance to make a lot of money over the years.

For example, back in 2011, some readers saw gains of 335% on Wheaton Precious Metals…



And I showed my readers 248% gains in a single year on International Royalty Corporation.

Then, a few years ago, I found a business I love even more. It's similar to Royal Gold and Franco-Nevada, but it's much smaller – around 1/50th the size of Franco-Nevada.

Yet, based on my research, its potential market is six times bigger, because in addition to gold and silver - it collects royalties on dozens of other resources too.

There are only a handful of companies on Earth that do anything like this.

You could have more than doubled your money since I first recommended it.

And I still consider it a screaming "buy" today, which is one reason I'm not mentioning the name. It's for my subscribers.

But as exciting as that royalty opportunity is – it's not the one I came forward to tell you about today… the one I'd put all my money in if I had to choose.

This idea, which I'll show you right now – could be even better.

Why?

It's a "hidden" opportunity. The market doesn't yet realize this is a royalty business – which is the only reason it's possible to buy it so cheaply today.

I seriously doubt that situation will last.

It's the kind of thing you're lucky to see once or twice in a lifetime.

To give you an idea of how powerful it can be when you get in on a company with a lucrative royalty stream at an early stage and a dirt-cheap price… consider this:

When Royal Gold started out, it was a literal penny stock. In the early '90s, you could have got in for 3 cents a share… and racked up total gains through today of more than 150,000%.

Now, I'm not saying this stock will gain 150,000%. But it's way, way too cheap.

And there's more to the story.

See, every other royalty company I've mentioned does more or less the same thing. They're great companies… but they're all playing the same game.

This one stands alone. Let me show you what I mean…

World's No. 1 Stock When Gold Booms

The No. 1 stock recommendation of my life is a company that makes millions of dollars from gold, silver, and other precious natural resources.

I call it "the Best Gold Business on Earth."

And I believe buying it today could be a lot like getting in on the world's best royalty companies at the very beginning of their astronomical runs.

But in this case, it's not a conventional royalty collector…

It's even better than that.

And it's not a miner… explorer… producer… or any other type of business you've likely heard of, either.

Those kinds of businesses are extremely risky. Even in a raging gold bull market they go bankrupt all the time, for many different reasons.

For example, one tiny quirk of geology can mean the mine doesn't have as much gold as the samples first suggested… or the metal can't be extracted as easily as the company had hoped.

News like that, and the stock can plummet.

Or miners go on strike. Or there's a rockslide on the one dirt road being used to move your 50-ton trucks.

Or gold falls out of favor with investors for a few years and trades at a price below your cost to produce… and you watch your cash savings burn away as the market drops.

The margins in the gold industry are razor-thin to begin with. One hiccup, and you're toast.

To make money, everything has to go right.

I hope you'll remember that before you buy another gold mining stock. Everything has to go right.

With the Best Gold Business on Earth – I believe it's completely different.

Here's how I explained it in the interview:

> Jared Kelly: Dan, you've set absurdly high expectations for what you call the Best Gold Business on Earth. And I'm assuming that's based on the idea that the gold price could skyrocket as millions of investors seek a safe haven when the next bear market arrives.
>
> Dan Ferris: Yes.
>
> Jared Kelly: But you've also said you think this stock could go up hundreds of percent no matter what happens to the gold price or the overall market.
>
> Dan Ferris: That's right. You really don't have to be a "gold bug" to want to own this stock. I frankly don't care what you think about mining stocks, or traditional royalty companies or owning physical gold or anything like that. This is a great business, full stop. And it's the kind of business I'd recommend in any market, whether it had anything to do with gold or not.
>
> Jared Kelly: So if everything goes wrong?
>
> Dan Ferris: I think it's reasonable to project a few hundred percent gains from here, just as a normal return expectation. It would need to rise 50% right now just to get to a basic fair valuation.
>
> You could put on a blindfold before you buy it and then forget you own it for 10 years – never once checking in on the gold market. I'm nearly certain you'd be a lot richer at the end.
>
> That's why this is "my" kind of stock… and not some high-risk speculation for gold diehards.
>
> Jared Kelly: Dan, lets get down to it. You've said this is a new kind of royalty firm… and a great business regardless of what you think of gold. And you've said it's basically the perfect stock to own in a potential recession. What does this company actually do?
>
> Dan Ferris: Sure. This is really important. So let's go back to what companies like Royal Gold and Franco-Nevada do. Like I mentioned, they typically make an upfront investment in a mining operation – and in exchange they own the right to collect a share of the revenues for a certain period of time. With gold mines nowadays, it's usually not much more than a decade or so.
>
> It's pretty low risk. And the math is pretty simple.
>
> Jared Kelly: As long as the total payouts exceed the upfront cost – it's a win.
>
> Dan Ferris: Right. And if production is strong, and gold prices soar… it can be a huge win.
>
> But here's the thing. With those companies, the payouts are still entirely dependent on the success of risky, capital-intensive mining operations.
>
> Jared Kelly: You're saying this type of royalty is different?
>
> Dan Ferris: Completely different. It's a payout on gold that's already been mined. Millions of ounces of gold. And not just once. Or once per year. But permanently… each quarter… forever.
>
> Jared Kelly: How is that possible? You're saying that this company somehow collects a royalty on gold that's already come out of the ground. Who pays it?
>
> Dan Ferris: Jared, you're a gold investor. You probably have.
>
> Jared Kelly: You're kidding.
>
> Dan Ferris: Don't worry, you're not alone. Millions of people make these royalty payments every quarter.
>
> Jared Kelly: It sounds like you're talking about some kind of a sleazy hidden tax.
>
> Dan Ferris: No way. This company plays an extremely useful role in the gold market. It's 100% transparent. There's nothing sneaky or involuntary about it. Think of it this way… if you use a credit card, you've paid thousands of dollars to Visa and Mastercard. You never think about it, because it's indirect. You don't have to actually pay them when you swipe. But it's no secret that these networks charge fees.
>
> Jared Kelly: It's built into the prices you pay for things.
>
> Dan Ferris: Right. And I don't think most people mind because we get something extremely valuable in return. It's a huge convenience. It drives $4 trillion in annual spending.
>
> By collecting just a tiny fraction of that… Visa is up over 1,200% since going public 11 years ago.
>
> Now think about the same kind of opportunity… but with gold.
>
> The Best Gold Business on Earth collects a fat, steady royalty-type payment not on a mining operation… but on a big chunk of the gold market itself.
>
> They essentially take a cut based on people's desire to own gold.
>
> Jared Kelly: It's a fascinating concept. I mean – gold goes up and down but it never really goes out of style.
>
> Dan Ferris: There's something called the Lindy effect, which means anything humans have been doing a long time they're likely to do it for an equally long time. The Egyptians started using electrum, which is a natural alloy of gold and silver, in precious objects 2,000 years before the pyramids.
>
> Humans have been using gold for 5,000 years. I think it's likely we'll see gold in widespread use 5,000 years from now. It's embedded in our DNA.
>
> And it simply won't be replaced by bitcoin… stocks… real estate or anything else, ever.
>
> Jared Kelly: Is that why you're saying you don't have to be a gold bug yourself to see the potential in this stock?
>
> Dan Ferris: Do you have to own an iPhone to make money on Apple?
>
> Jared Kelly: Of course not.
>
> Dan Ferris: Can you look at Starbucks and see a world class business with millions of addicted customers that come back every day – even if you hate coffee yourself?
>
> The truth is… if you don't think collecting a royalty on people's desire to own gold is a good business model – this idea simply isn't for you.
>
> Personally, it makes me so greedy I'm beside myself.
>
> This is a way to own a royalty on the gold market itself. It's a hundred times better than any mining royalty I've ever seen. If you don't agree that's attractive – don't waste your time.
>
> Jared Kelly: As long as people own gold, it pays?
>
> Dan Ferris: As long as people own gold – it pays. No matter how the mining industry is doing.
>
> Jared Kelly: I have to say… it still sounds like something shady or complicated. I'm wary of companies that make money through financial engineering.
>
> Dan Ferris: This is nothing like that. I hate crap like that too. And I don't go anywhere near it in my research. Look at where we've made gains in my research letter: 190% on Apple… 133% on Intel… 150% on AB InBev – that's the company that makes Budweiser beer… 98% on Walmart… 125% on Berkshire Hathaway. These aren't our biggest gains, by the way — not even close. But what do they have in common?
>
> Jared Kelly: They're just really solid businesses. What you call "world dominators" in a lot of cases.
>
> Dan Ferris: Right. With real profits and real, sustainable business models. This is the same kind of opportunity. But it's trading at a level where virtually nothing has to go right for you to start making money. Gold prices don't need to go up one penny. This company doesn't have to win a single government approval… or turn over an inch of soil.
>
> By the way Jared, I'm not actually against investing in mining stocks. I've followed the resource markets for years and I've made those kinds of investments myself. When the stars align, you can make a lot of money very quickly. You can also lose your shirt just as fast.
>
> But this isn't that.
>
> This is exactly the kind of business I love to recommend. Nothing has to go right.

Reader, I've never felt more strongly about this than I do right now.

It's why I had to come forward one final time and make sure this prediction wasn't lost to history.

Whether you're newer to Stansberry Research… or simply missed the biggest stock call of my life – for whatever reason – this is your chance, right now, today.

Likely the last one you'll ever see.

I'll say it again. Now, nothing in the market is ever certain, but I believe this is an opportunity where you could triple your money or more – based on the growth opportunities "hidden" in this business, beyond the rock-solid "royalty" business.

Gold prices don't need to go up one penny.

This company doesn't have to win a single government approval… or turn over an inch of soil.

It just keeps collecting its royalty on the gold market, from millions of investors all over the world… every month… forever. It practically gushes cash. And it's also sitting on a some lucrative "wildcards" I haven't even mentioned yet.

Nothing has to go right.

Of course, I'd be lying if I didn't tell you that I expect the upside in this stock to explode when gold gets going.

And that's exactly what's happening right now…

The Start of a Decade of Gains

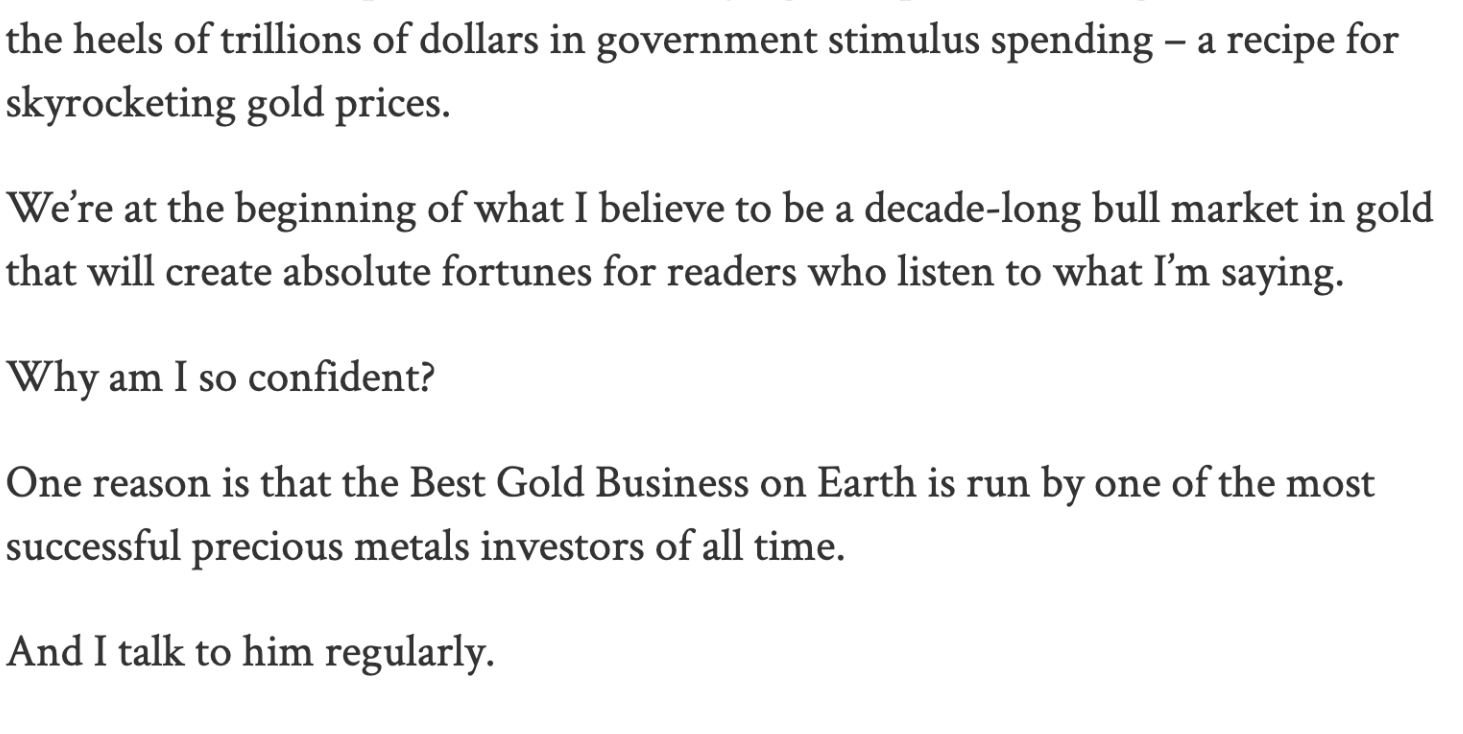
Whether you choose to play the speculative bubble in stocks today or not – surely you know it has to end.

And that investors will keep flocking to the safety of gold like they always do.

Gold already hit an all-time high during the pandemic and political chaos of 2020.

But Bloomberg Intelligence predicts the rally is just getting started.

Keep in mind, following the last financial crisis in 2008 – gold nearly tripled from $700 to $1,900.



As their gold analyst put it:

"A simple rhyme of history means we get to near $4,500 and it's about time." That's 2.5 times higher than today's price.

Many experts are even more bullish.

Forbes' MoneyShow column predicts $7,500 gold – saying, "It's poised to outperform stocks and bonds, and it's where you want to be."

Meanwhile, even top Fed officials are saying to expect much higher inflation on the heels of trillions of dollars in government stimulus spending – a recipe for skyrocketing gold prices.

We're at the beginning of what I believe to be a decade-long bull market in gold that will create absolute fortunes for readers who listen to what I'm saying.

Why am I so confident?

One reason is that the Best Gold Business on Earth is run by one of the most successful precious metals investors of all time.

And I talk to him regularly.

Let Me Introduce You To "Mr. X"

To protect my source's privacy – and to protect the details of this opportunity for my subscribers – I can't tell you his name in this public presentation.

But it's a name many Stansberry readers would recognize.

In fact, you could have made a small fortune simply by riding his coattails.

The same way a handful of ordinary people in Nebraska became multimillionaires simply by handing their savings to Warren Buffett – and letting the Oracle of Omaha worry about how to invest.

Over the years, Mr. X has run a series of legendary private market funds focused on resource investments.

One of these funds produced 28% annualized returns over 10 years.

To give you an idea how incredible that is…

If you invested $10,000 and were able to grow it by 28% per year – in 10 years you'd have $118,000.

In 20 years, you'd have more than $1 million.

Mr. X's 28%-per-year performance is on par with some of best and most famous "mainstream" investment funds of the past 50 years, like:

- George Soros' Quantum Fund (32% annual returns)
- Julian Robertson's Tiger Fund (31% annual returns)
- Peter Lynch's Magellan Fund (29% annual returns)

So it's no wonder that the Best Gold Business on Earth paid tens of millions to acquire Mr. X's private funds -- and his expertise.

And some of Mr. X's individual positions have done far better.

He was involved in financing a company at around 2 cents a share… the stake then soared to around $10 a share… which would've been a near 50,000%.

Another deal his firm financed at $0.50 sold out at $200 – a 40,000% gain.

The point is… most people would kill to get some money into Mr. X's hands.

But if you know anything about private investing, the harsh reality won't surprise you:

Unless you're a very well-connected millionaire in the resource world, you've got no chance.

But when you invest in the Best Gold Business on Earth – you get him on your team for free.

I want to take you back to my conversation with Jared Kelly.

This was where we got to talking about Mr. X. But as you'll see, things took an emotional turn pretty quickly:

> Jared Kelly: Dan, I know you have to be careful here, but can you give any more detail on your relationship to Mr. X?
>
> Dan Ferris: I've known him personally since the very beginning of my career as a published analyst 20 years ago. He was well-known even back then, but nothing like he is today. He's been an incredibly generous colleague. Whenever I need a candid take on the resource market and its players… I call him and I get the real story.
>
> Jared Kelly: And he's given you insights about the Best Gold Business on Earth?
>
> Dan Ferris: For sure. But I want to be clear about something. This is really important. Mr. X does not give me non-public information about his business. He's a corporate officer and doing that would be reckless or worse. He would never do that because he's not a dummy.
>
> Jared Kelly: Everything you've said is based on public information.
>
> Dan Ferris: Yeah. That's how I analyze every business. And it's all I've ever needed to help my readers make a fortune. I didn't need an inside source to show readers seven times their money on Constellation, or five times their money on Prestige.
>
> Jared Kelly: I counted them up and you've closed out 19 different positions for at least triple digit gains in your research. Four more, for at least 95%.
>
> Dan Ferris: That's another reason why I spend very little time promoting myself or my ideas. In this business, you have a track record. It's out there for people to see – winners and losers.
>
> Jared Kelly: I know you won't say this yourself, but I just want to say for our viewers that Dan has probably the most loyal following of any analyst at Stanberry Research.
>
> Dan Ferris: That's kind of you. The fact is, outside my family, these are the people that I live for. They get 100% of my free time and attention. So you know, when you talk about me being very private or not liking to do interviews… that's really what's going on. I'm not a fan of drawing a lot of attention to my work because the right people eventually find me on their own and then stick with me for life. And I'd rather not spend a minute on trying to get people's attention when I could be finding another opportunity like Constellation Brands or the Best Gold Business on Earth.
>
> Jared Kelly: I'll be honest, Dan. I think most people hear "value investing" and they go to sleep.
>
> Dan Ferris: I'm not surprised.
>
> Most people can't stay awake long enough to read an accounting book, or pore over SEC filings trying to figure out what makes a particular company tick, or stand in the real estate records office thumbing through some dusty old book.
>
> So they wind up chasing after anything that's "exciting" too them, that's getting talked about a lot on the news.
>
> It's not all their fault. In a way, you could say they've been trained to "gamble" their hard-earned savings on companies – without having any idea what they're worth.
>
> Most people spend more time comparing prices on groceries… or scoping out their next TV set than they do scrutinizing their investments.
>
> I wish they wouldn't, but what can I do?
>
> Ultimately, these people wise up. But not before they get hurt… And it's a painful lesson when real money is on the line. But you know it and I know it… gambling doesn't work.

Jared Kelly: I've made those mistakes myself, Dan. I lost money in a triple-leveraged gold fund called "Nugget." In cryptos. In speculations like GoPro, the camera company. I have the world's best financial ideas at my fingertips, but I've still gotten lured into that kind of investing.

Dan Ferris: You're not alone here, Jared. Real people get hurt by this stuff. By getting sucked in to the idea of the next big thing. It's heartbreaking. And I don't blame them in the least because investing is really, really hard. I've taken my licks too. And I've spent half my life developing and learning an ultra-disciplined approach where that kind of thing is far, far less likely to happen. Half my life and it's still hard. But I've given half my life to this, so yeah – I think I've found a better way.

So you've asked me today – you know, why do this interview? How can you say you don't like hype and then get all fired up on camera?

And the answer is… if you were me and you found potentially the Best Gold Business on Earth – what would you do? If you found this stock that you believed could go for 2,000% potentially in a terrible market and save people from a tremendous amount of pain. If you believed it had huge upside and very limited downside… Would you keep it to yourself? I hope not…

That's why I did this. And after today, I'll know I did all I can. And I'll go back to focusing 100% on my subscribers.

Sorry for the rant. But it's the truth!

Jared Kelly: I think it would be hard to make a stronger argument than that.

Wait… It Gets Even Better

Few people know this, but a couple years ago, the Best Gold Business on Earth quietly closed a transaction that doubled its core business

Not gradually, but overnight.

Keep in mind, profit margins on this newly acquired business were already "very, very high and sticky" according to the one company's senior corporate officers.

I spoke to folks at the time who estimated they were around 80%.

That means for every dollar that comes in the door… only about 20 cents goes to the basic costs of managing this business. The rest is all profit.

To put that in perspective, Amazon has a corresponding margin of around 25%. Apple 38%. And those are two of the most successful companies in the world – in a booming tech market. Boeing's latest full-year figure was 6%.

It's a simple economy of scale.

See, it doesn't cost this company anything extra to manage its new, world-class assets.

It doesn't need new trucks, new buildings, or new computers.

It could simply start cashing a LOT more checks, starting now… and continuing until there are no investors left on earth who want to own gold.

As a result… its ridiculous 80% profit margins could go even higher… while drawing on a much bigger segment of the gold market.

And this much larger royalty business is not the end of the story.

It's just so good that I've glossed over a whole collection of business segments – tied to the upside in gold in silver. All money makers.

Based on my valuation of the company – you get the upside of these other businesses essentially for free.

Here's what I told Jared Kelly:

Jared Kelly: What about diversification? I mean, even if this royalty stream seems solid… isn't it risky to invest in anything that relies on one single revenue stream to survive?

Dan Ferris: Yeah, that's not what this is. You're actually getting six different revenue streams… and five of them have nothing to do with the royalty on gold ownership that I talked about. I just didn't mention them because based on my valuation, you get the other five for free. But its worth noting because they work synergistically…

Jared Kelly: What does that mean?

Dan Ferris: Think of it like this. When you buy an iPhone, you're starting a relationship with Apple that goes way beyond your initial purchase. First of all, people are loyal to Apple. You're more likely to buy an iPad or a Mac. Even if you don't, you're likely to buy the wireless earbuds and an extra charger. And then you go get apps in the app store, and Apple gets a cut of that.

Jared Kelly: And the Best Gold Business on Earth has a similar relationship with gold investors?

Dan Ferris: A lot like that. They just got hundreds of thousands of new customers, thanks to the deal I mentioned. Now they're seeing that snowball effect where people who start in one area create revenue in another and another. And it's a great example of why it could triple from here without any move in the gold price.

And there's another reason I'm expecting this stock to take off very quickly – beginning right now – and not come back…

The Floodgates Open

Very recently, the Best Gold Business on Earth "uplisted" from a Canadian stock exchange to the NYSE.

And combined every 10 shares into one – so it now has a double-digit share price.

These moves may seem "procedural" to you – but they're a BIG deal.

I believe this company knows its shares are in demand – for all the reasons I've told you today.

But the Canadian listing and lower share price meant many of the world's largest investors – institutions like mutual funds, pension funds, and big banks – couldn't buy shares.

They're limited by outdated rules that meant the Best Gold Business on Earth was treated like a penny stock – a reckless place to put investor money.

It was insane. In decades of stock research… with a reputation for being rigorously risk-averse… I've never seen an opportunity so good. Never seen a financial fortress like this with so much upside.

Pensioners and retirees should be thrilled to have some of their money in this stock.

But the big institutions couldn't do it.

Now they can.

And I'm expecting billions could flow in, driving the share price higher.

I believe fund managers are desperate for exposure to gold without rolling the dice on risky mining operations.

This is the hands-down best way to get it – and the smart money knows it.

The more than 3% dividend as I write this – which the company has been hiking – doesn't hurt either.

Now nothing is guaranteed in the market ever, but I see a few hundred percent gains as the conservative scenario. And I know I'd be relieved to have some money in ONE stock that will give me all the upside of the gold surge in the coming years without ever having to guess about geology or mining techniques or anything like that.

Of course, it's completely your decision if that's the kind of business you'd want to own. And I'd never want to suggest that any investment comes without risk.

My view is: If you'd rather roll the dice on "blank check" companies… penny biotech stocks… or even cash-burning junior gold miners with no hope of ever becoming profitable… be my guest. And good luck.

At this point, I've said my piece… and I can go back to my private life with a clear conscience…

… knowing I gave every Stansberry reader a chance to learn how to get in on the single best idea I've ever had, on the ground floor.

This Is Your One-Time Invitation

Bottom line: I believe the Best Gold Business on Earth today could be the best opportunity I've found in my entire career of picking stocks.

Readers often ask me: "Dan, if you had to put everything into one stock, which would it be?"

Most analysts will never tell you – either because they don't know… or because they're not willing to risk their reputation on the chance of being wrong.

But for me, this is it – the one stock I'd bet everything on.

If you'd like to learn more, I've just published a special report that covers this opportunity in full.

It's called The Hands-Down, No. 1 Pick of My Career.

It's available online, right now.

But it's only for paying members of my secretive and little-known research service, called Extreme Value.

If you're thinking I might divulge the details of this opportunity in an interview… or in Stansberry's free emails… don't hold your breath.

My subscribers are special… and my whole career is dedicated to their financial education and helping them with their wealth.

That's why I rarely ever make videos like this.

And why… even though I'd love to help you to make money… frankly, you're not my priority if you're not a part of our group.

But today, right now… I'm inviting you in.

Once I've done this… I'll go back to working exclusively for subscribers. You're certainly welcome to listen to my podcast, where I interview interesting folks and give my big-picture view of the markets.

But I don't use it to share my best individual recommendations – and I never will. They're much too valuable.

Inside my new report, you'll learn exactly what this company is… including the stock ticker and all the details of how it works… our recommended buy-up-to price… and what to expect going forward, including how I expect it could see 1,000% gains or more over the long term as gold surges.

Keep in mind, by the time you see this, the stock could be trading very close to – or even above – the maximum price I recommend you pay.

If you're interested, it's critical that you act quickly when you have a chance to buy below the recommended price and not chase the stock higher.

It might take you days or weeks to establish a position at his recommended price. You need to be able to exercise patience and discipline.

Now, nothing is ever guaranteed, but I believe you'll sleep easier once you've made this investment. You won't have to worry about missing a thing as gold could surge toward $5,000 an ounce or more in the coming years…

Which brings me to one more thing I want you to see before you make a decision…

A Hidden "Call Option" Nobody Knows About

The Best Gold Business on Earth is sitting on little-known investment that could soon outshine everything else I've told you about today.

Even the world-class royalty business.

This investment isn't the primary reason I recommend you invest. I believe the upside could still be hundreds of percent, even without this wildcard.

But it's a BIG one.

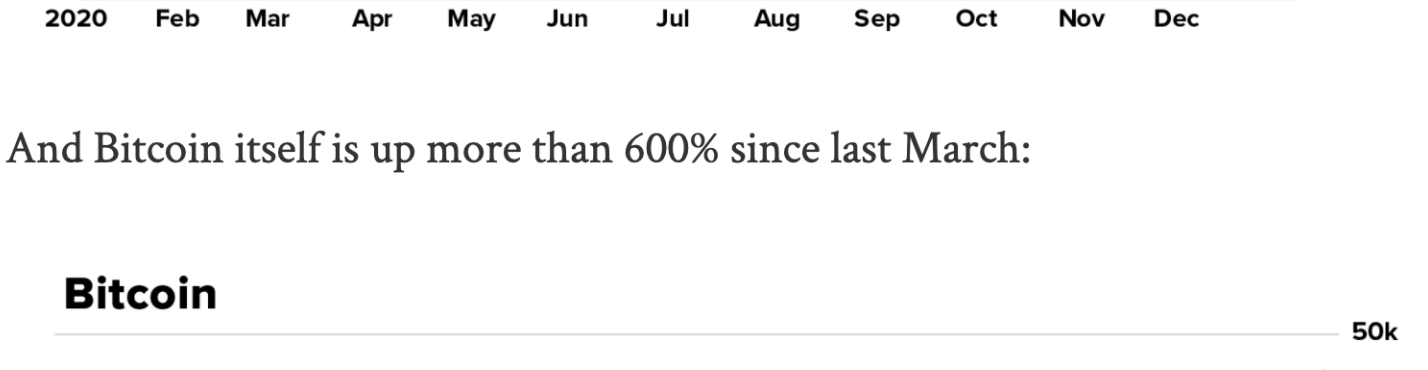
In short, this company owns a substantial stake in a blockchain-based gold venture that could create a bigger gain for investors than everything else I've talked about today.

I believe that it could pay out big time. And by owning this stock, you get the potential benefit essentially for free right now.

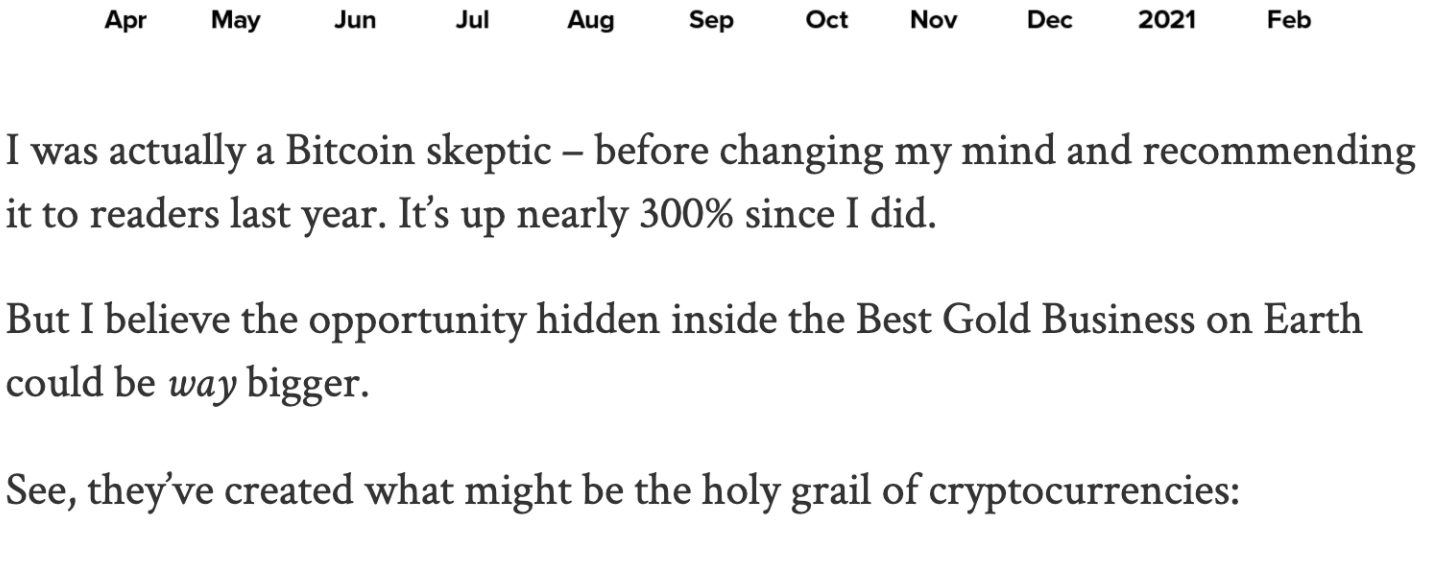
Most investors don't even know about this yet. But as more and more find out, you could see a huge, overnight move higher in this stock as blockchain-crazed investors pour in.

This kind of explosive move has been happening quite often recently…

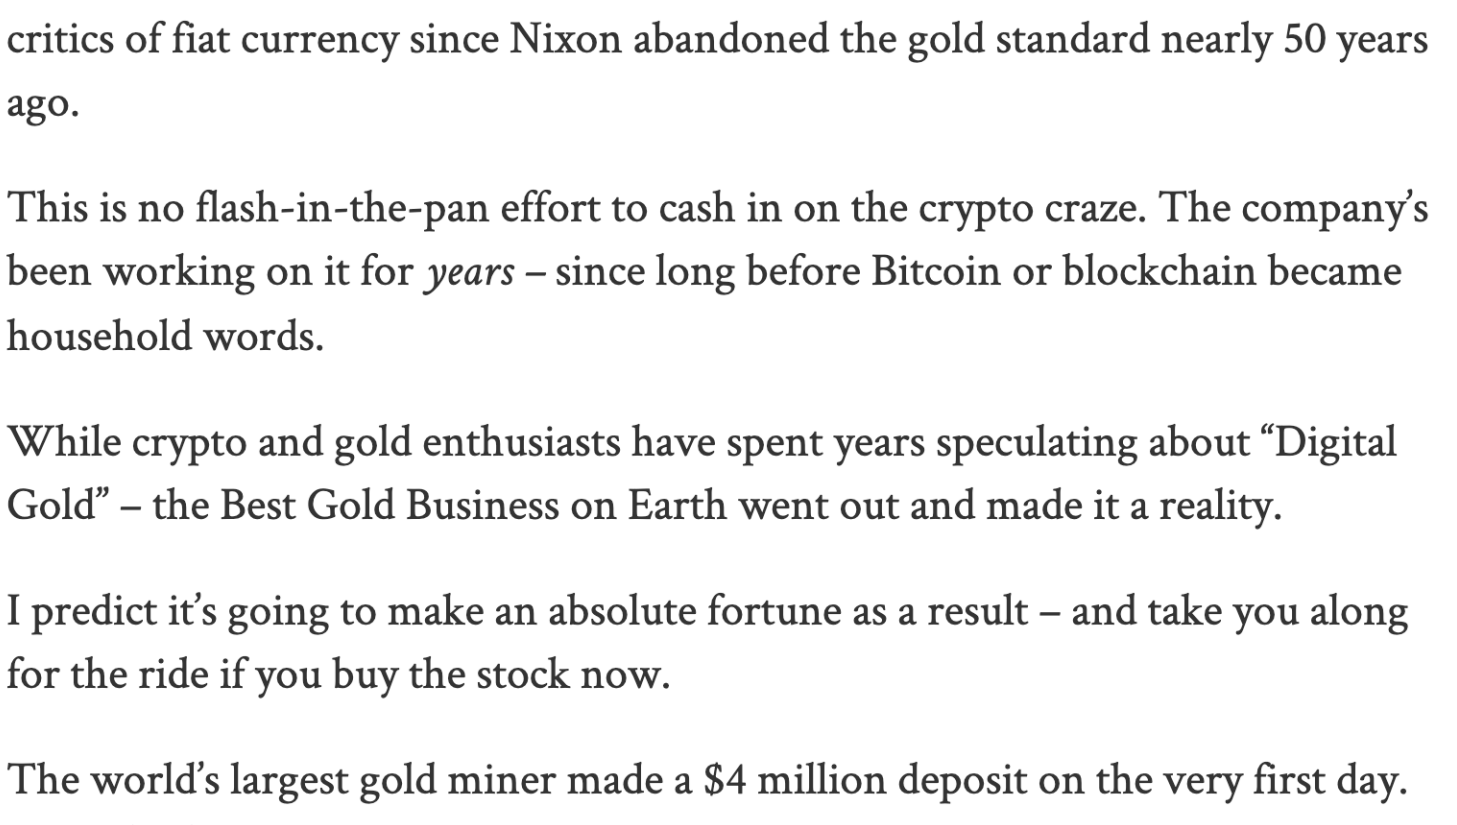
For example, Overstock.com shot up 580% in 2020 thanks to its private market stakes in blockchain technology:



A company called Riot Blockchain – more than 1,400%:



And Bitcoin itself is up more than 600% since last March:



I was actually a Bitcoin skeptic – before changing my mind and recommending it to readers last year. It's up nearly 300% since I did.

But I believe the opportunity hidden inside the Best Gold Business on Earth could be way bigger.

See, they've created what might be the holy grail of cryptocurrencies:

A fully redeemable, gold-backed crypto token.

In other words, this company owns a piece of the technology that will make gold into money again… which has been a dream of hard asset investors and critics of fiat currency since Nixon abandoned the gold standard nearly 50 years ago.

This is no flash-in-the-pan effort to cash in on the crypto craze. The company's been working on it for years – since long before Bitcoin or blockchain became household words.

While crypto and gold enthusiasts have spent years speculating about "Digital Gold" – the Best Gold Business on Earth went out and made it a reality.

I predict it's going to make an absolute fortune as a result – and take you along for the ride if you buy the stock now.

The world's largest gold miner made a $4 million deposit on the very first day. Several others are major investors.

And even if this real, gold-backed money doesn't become as big as bitcoin (though it should), it could radically disrupt how gold is owned and traded.

As Bloomberg reports:

> "About $27 billion of gold changes hands every day in over-the-counter markets where settlements can sometimes take days, leaving price risk for buyers and sellers. Using blockchain promises more transparency, security and speedier deals."

Imagine a technology that captured even a tiny sliver of that $27 billion *a day potential, which could get a lot bigger as this crypto technology makes gold trading simpler and attracts more investors.

I believe this alone could double or triple the value of the Best Gold Business on earth from where it's trading right now.

It's yet another reason I consider this stock the single best opportunity I've ever found.

And keep in mind – as excited as I am about the Best Gold Business on earth – it's just one of the opportunities you'll be able to access when you get started with Extreme Value.

Stansberry's Longest-Running Elite Research

The fact is, Extreme Value is responsible for some of the biggest winning recommendations in the 20-year history of Stansberry Research.

We're sitting on open gains of 568%… 288%… and 129%… to name a few. Along with dozens of triple-digit closed winners like:

- 150% gains on AB Inbev
- 201% gains on Alexander and Baldwin
- 173% gains on Altria
- 192% open gains on Apple
- 125% gains on Berkshire-Hathaway
- 111% gains on Blair
- 107% gains on Brookfield Asset Management
- 629% gains on Constellation
- 138% gains on Encana
- 124% gains on Gateway
- 142% gains on Icahn Enterprises
- 132% gains on Intel
- 248% gains on International Royalty
- 145% open gains on Johnson & Johnson
- 249% gains on KHD Humboldt
- 133% gains on Latin American Export Bank
- 113% gains on Philip Morris
- 99% gains on Posco
- 104% gains on Portfolio Recovery Associates
- 406% gains on Prestige
- 143% gains on Realty Income Corp.
- 98% gains on Walmart

I've done this while making far fewer recommendations than other research services… and taking on far less risk.

Maybe that's why Porter Stansberry said, "Extreme Value is the best newsletter in America at any price. There is no doubt that if you read it you will do very well with your investments and outperform the stock market."

And maybe it's why Extreme Value is the rare research service where we hear glowing feedback from financial professionals who already have millions of dollars of research at their fingertips…

Like Donald H., who told me:

> "I am a 37-year retired professional from the investment business that involved bonds, stocks, options, annuities and life insurance. All I can say is this: We should have had you at the head of our investment department."

Jeff K., who wrote:

> "I am 42 in the finance industry, and frankly get more sound, safe advice from your suggestions than from anywhere. I only wish I had this advice back when I started making a good living in my mid 20's."

Rob C., who said:

> "I have been in the Financial Service field for 25 years and you have taught me more about investing then any of the Wall Street analysts I used to work with."

And Jim P., who writes:

> "My clients are on the way to the bank with Extreme Value recommendations."

Every recommendation I make is the result of hundreds of hours of meticulous research.

I never compromise my rigorous standards just to put out a new recommendation.

I hunt for word-class opportunities. And I refuse to ever recommend anything else – even if that means sitting tight sometimes.

As former portfolio manager and mutual fund manager T.C. B. told me:

> "I'm comforted knowing that when you make a new recommendation, it carries your full conviction as opposed to other analysts who feel compelled to churn out a new recommendation every month just to keep their readers happy. I've learned more from you in the last 4 years than from others in the prior nearly 40 years."

Extreme Value is about showing you only the very best opportunities… and often holding onto them for years.

This is one reason my work has attracted more readers from investment banks than any other research letter I know of.

Merrill Lynch…. Bank of America… Chase… Credit Suisse… Smith Barney… Citigroup… PNC… Citizens Bank… J.P. Morgan… Raymond James… UBS… Moodys… AG Edwards… Wachovia… Wells Fargo…

These are folks who could afford literally any research in the world.

I even got a note from a legendary hedge-fund manager, who famously outperformed the S&P 500 for 13 straight years.

He once wrote our research firm to say, "I read Extreme Value every month. It's one of the best value-oriented research advisories I receive."

But by now of course, you might be wondering…

How much does it cost?

Well… if you've been with Stansberry Research for a while, you're probably familiar with the pricing of our high-end research services. They typically cost $2,000… $3,000… even as much as $5,500 per year.

And I'm sure you understand that no one would ever pay that kind of money without being certain that our research is worth far more than the upfront cost.

Considering the fact that I'm sharing my absolute No. 1 idea of all time… and he believes it could multiply your investment five-fold or more…

I think Stansberry Research could be charging at least $4,000 to get in the door and receive Extreme Value for a single year.

But that's not what we do.

I want Extreme Value to be accessible to as many people as possible. Especially now, when I'm sharing the single best stock discovery of my entire life.

So we keep the price thousands of dollars below almost any comparable service.

It normally costs $1,500 per year.

But today I'm offering something dramatically better.

How to Get Started Right Now

As I mentioned, one full year of Extreme Value costs $1,500.

If that sounds like too much, I recommend you skip this opportunity and try one of our entry-level products instead.

The reality is that, even at $1,500 – I believe your subscription could pay for itself many times over on just a single recommendation.

As subscriber Mark H. said:

> "Anyone new to Dan, just wait. A few years down the road you will be so very pleased."

But here's the thing. I want to make this decision as easy as possible for you.

SPECIAL REPORT
THE HANDS-DOWN
NO. 1 PICK
OF MY CAREER
STANSBERRY RESEARCH

I want to make sure you have a chance to access The Hands-Down, No. 1 Pick of My Career*…* with the best possible chance to see the highest upside.

And I've made no secret of the fact that I want to get the single best idea of my life in the hands of as many readers as possible, while there's still time to act.

So for a short time, I'm DOUBLING the value of your initial subscription.

> Pay $1,500 today and you'll get TWO full years of access to *Extreme Value.

It amounts to a massive 50% OFF the usual price.

No catches. No hidden charges. And no automatic renewal of your subscription.

I'm confident that when you try my work, you'll want to stay on for many years to come.

But that decision is completely up to you. You'll have two full years to decide.

Keep in mind – my work is not designed for a single-year time horizon.

My ideas typically play out over several years or longer. I'd prefer if we never offer single-year subscription terms at all.

But today, you can pay the one-year price and get two full years of research instead – ensuring you won't lose access as the No. 1 idea of my life begins to play out…

Along with what could be a massive bull run in gold…

An explosion in the hidden crypto opportunity I've identified…

And what could be a series of potentially life-changing value opportunities across the markets.

Now of course, all investments carry risk and past performance does not guarantee future success. You should not invest more than you are willing to lose.

Most importantly, you'll get immediate access to my new report, The Hands-Down, No. 1 Pick of My Career, and have the chance to learn how to position yourself to see 1,000% gains in the coming years, if things go how I expect.

Just keep in mind: We can't allow any refunds on this offer.

If we did, thousands of people would simply sign up… take advantage my No. 1 all-time stock idea… and then cancel.

That's not how our business model works.

And it wouldn't be fair to my existing subscribers.

However, if you're unhappy for any reason whatsoever, you can contact us within 30 days and receive a 100% refund in the form of Stansberry Credit, which you can use for the next year toward any of our 20+ publications.

If that bothers you – no problem.

But frankly, I think you'll regret missing out on the idea that I'd pour my life savings into.

You may never get an investment opportunity this good again.

And today I'm offering a huge 50% discount to join my small and secretive research group…

… and get two full years of access for the price of one.

I hope this discount makes getting started a "no brainer" for you – because I'm passionate about getting this one great idea into your hands, right away.

You'll see what I mean in this one last on-camera exchange:

> Jared Kelly: Dan… this is my last question. You made an interesting comment at the beginning of this interview. You said you weren't sure you'd ever find another idea that's better than this. Don't you think that's kind of an odd thing to tell potential subscribers to your research?
>
> Dan Ferris: No, I don't. It took me 20 years to find something this good.
>
> From a probability standpoint, you could say that you'd expect me to find something similar once every 20 years, on average.
>
> That doesn't mean we sit and wait another 20 years. It could happen next week. Or never.
>
> What we know is… in 20 years of meticulous research, this is the single best idea I've ever had, bar none. And if I had to pick a stock to put every penny of my personal wealth in, this would be it.
>
> It's a genuine once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. And I say that knowing the kind of people who subscribe to my work have a low threshold for B.S. So I'm not going to sit here and say, "Oh yeah, next week's idea could go for 4,000%"
>
> Jared Kelly: Very candid.
>
> Dan Ferris, [continuing]: Second… if the only thing you ever get from reading my research is to see a potential 2,000% gain on this one stock – which could happen in the midst of a massive financial crisis in America – will it have been worth it?
>
> I'm not suggesting that's going to be the case. But just rationally, I mean, come on.
>
> The reality is we're entering into what's going to be a friggin' bonanza for value investors like me. Just like how back in 2008, after Lehman Brothers crashed the market, we recommended ADP, the company that processes one-sixth of all U.S. payrolls. It's up 490% or so today.
>
> Or in March 2009, when nobody wanted stocks, and we recommended International Royalty, which we closed out a year later for a 248% gain.
>
> Or May 2009 when we recommended Prestige Brands Holdings and went on to see a nearly 410% gain.
>
> We're going to see another moment just like that. And in my research letter we're going to belly up to the trough and gorge ourselves on amazing opportunities.
>
> And I'll save you the suspense. Obviously, they're not all going to soar 2,000% like I expect this one great idea could. But I think we'll see dozens of opportunities to see triple digits.

By now, I've shown you all the evidence I can in this public presentation.

If you don't agree – no problem. I'm grateful for your attention today.

Otherwise, I urge you to take advantage of this offer before it expires… instantly my full report on The Hands-Down, No. 1 Pick of My Career right now… and consider taking a position as soon as you're able, should you choose to invest.

Of course, you'll also receive access to my full Extreme Value model portfolio – containing every single stock I recommend today.

And you'll begin receiving my Extreme Value newsletter every month, for two full years – for half off the usual price.

Just remember, this offer will disappear soon.

I hope you don't pass it up.

To secure your spot, click GET STARTED below:

GET STARTED

Regards,

Dan Ferris,
Editor, Extreme Value
February 2021

GET STARTED

Legal Notices: Here is our Disclosures and Details page. DISCLOSURES ABOUT OUR BUSINESS contains critical information that will help you use our work appropriately and give you a far better understanding of how our business works - both the benefits it might offer you and the inevitable limitations of our products. Although this is not a part of our "Disclosures and Details" page, you can view our company's privacy policy here.

© 2021 Stansberry Research