Today's #MyTOHLife challenge post comes to you from 39,000 feet!

An Accomplishment I'm Proud Of...

Last year was an excellent year for me. I hit $50,000 in all time sales. I promoted in rank to Master (Jedi, lol), I did over $10,000 in sales, and I was third in sales in my director's down line.

But something I'm really proud of is paying for my plane ticket to England entirely out of my commissions. All $1000+ of it.

This time of year is quiet for me where Trades of Hope is concerned. I pick up commission through my own orders: restock after the events at the back end restock after the events at the back end of the previous year. It picks up in summer and then goes along at a furious pace from late September onwards. This is when the craft shows take place and people are also willing to share Trades of Hope through parties. Last August, I began reaching out to customers and inviting them to share.

And that's how I came to be here, in a half empty plane with a row to myself. I did the work, and now I'm enjoying the reward.
