vectormarketing  Life's waves can knock you down, but with every storm you'll learn to ride the highs and navigate the lows.

Resiliency is not about never wiping out- it's about popping back up, getting back on your board, and paddling back out to find your next wave.

"I started my journey with Vector in 2016 after I had just gotten kicked out of my home. At the time, I had my car and a job at a nursing home making minimum wage.

I was looking for a way to make extra income so I started searching on Craigslist and found Vector.

Vector has taught me more life lessons (and financial lessons) than any teacher, school, textbook etc. ever could.

I was looking for a way to make extra income so I started searching on Craigslist and found Vector.

Training was nerve wracking and I remember nearly crying when trying to write down names of people I knew. I didn't have many leads to start with but I just started dialing.

I did 4-5 demos with no sales and I felt defeated. My dad encouraged me not to give up so I kept trying and slowly got better and got more referrals. It was hard but I was able to make enough money to support myself and was able to quit my job at the nursing home to pursue sales full time - best decision ever!

Vector has taught me more life

Above anything- thank you Vector for all that you have done for us, the customers, the many home cooks, and more - for the lessons and experience that will last a lifetime.

Vector has taught me more life lessons (and financial lessons) than any teacher, school, textbook etc ever could. I thrived in an environment where I didn't have to trade my time with money. I found my passion and today I'm still in sales.

I promise I wouldn't be here I am at right now - living in San Jose, with my wife and pugs, and trying for a baby - if it weren't for my experiences with Vector.
